

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABBOT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (688-5230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Moving van fire damages $3,000 in furnishings

Fire erupted Tuesday afternoon in a Global Van Lines trailer in Arlington Heights, damaging about $3,000 worth of furnishings.

The trailer, which was parked in the moving company's yard at 2512 S. Clearbrook Dr., also was severely damaged, but no estimates were available.

Fire officials said the cause of the fire was under investigation, but Ted Boyer, president of the company, said he suspected the blaze might be attributable to flammable liquids stored in some equipment. However, firefighters reported there was no gasoline in lawnmowers on the vehicle.

Global was moving possessions of Robert Matavina, Plymouth, Ind., to a home in Missouri, firefighters reported. The tractor-trailer was pulling into the Lohal lot when the driver noticed smoke coming from the trailer about 5:40 p.m.

Two fire engines were dispatched, and firefighters had to unload some of the belongings before extinguishing the fire, officials said.

Boyer said the furnishings and trailer were insured. "It was something beyond our control that it happened," he said.

Village may back race track annex

by KURT BAER

Indications are growing that the Arlington Heights Village Board will back up the Arlington Heights Park Board's efforts to annex Arlington Park Race Track.

Village trustees Monday night came very close to endorsing a park board resolution aimed at getting the lucrative race track property disconnected from the Salt Creek Rural Park District and annexed to the Arlington Heights Park District as a part of the present negotiations over a football stadium proposal for Arlington Park.

Although two trustees took exception to strong words in the resolution, none voiced disagreement with the ultimate objective.

"For the ultimate good of the village, this is a necessary step," said Trustee Frank Palmatier, who added he believes Madison Square Garden Corp., which owns Arlington Park, "may see it that way too."

IN THE PAST, William Moore, attorney for Madison Square Garden, has objected to hopecoitching the 450-acre race track from one park district to another, labeling the move "an act of piracy."

Palmatier said he did not think the village board should make park district annexation a prerequisite to village approval of any race track development plan.

"The board should go on record favoring, in principal, the desirability of the Arlington Park property being disconnected from the Salt Creek Rural Park District and annexed to the Arlington Heights Park District," he said.

"The board should ask Madison Square Garden to give earnest consideration to this and submit an answer in writing within a reasonable period of time."

THIS KIND OF moral persuasion, Palmatier said, could avoid legal wrangling that would stem from making the change of park districts mandatory, he said.

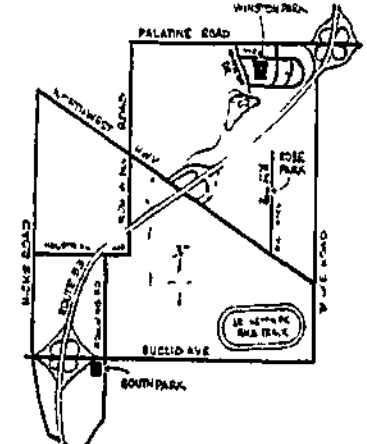

"I think there is a very good chance that they (Madison Square Garden) will concur, and this will avoid a lot of hard feelings," he said.

Trustee David Griffin also said he supports the objectives of the Arlington Heights Park District. But he took exception to part of the park board resolution which calls the Salt Creek Rural Park District no longer viable.

"I think that is rather strong and we shouldn't be on record condemning another park district in this way," Griffin said.

Trustee Madeline Schroeder backed up the park board.

dents, she said, and most Arlington Heights residents are part of the Arlington Heights Park District.

If Arlington Heights residents are to get the full tax benefits from development of the race track property, Arlington Park must pay its taxes to the Arlington Heights Park District, she said.

It was only the urging of Village Pres. James T. Ryan that forestalled village board support for the Arlington Heights Park Board Monday night.

In the name of intergovernmental cooperation, Ryan persuaded the board to hold up its decision until its next meeting Sept. 8 so that Salt Creek officials an opportunity to back have a chance to be heard.

SALT CREEK already has filed written protests to Arlington Heights' attempts to carve out of its boundaries the Arlington Park property. Still, Ryan said, the trustees owe Salt Creek officials an opportunity to back up their written statements with a personal appearance before the village board Sept. 8.

Arlington Heights Park District representatives will be extended the same invitation.

It is a matter of "basic fairness," Ryan said.

Besides eventual annexation of the race track property, the Arlington Heights Park District resolution has two other objectives — park district control of recreation facilities planned within the race track development and compensation for the elimination of the race track's nine-hole golf course.

PEDESTRIANS and cars alike had to sit and wait Tuesday morning when a stalled freight train blocked rail crossings in downtown Arlington Heights.

Bike racks ordered for downtown area

Several bicycle racks for downtown Arlington Heights have been ordered and should be in place soon, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said.

The bike racks will be placed in front of fire hydrants where automobile parking is prohibited. Village fire officials do not believe the bikes will block access to the hydrants, Hanson said.

The need for bicycle parking was dramatized recently by the opening of an ice cream store on Campbell Street.

Bicycles blocking the sidewalk in front of the store have resulted in $5 police tickets being issued to several youngsters.

that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in."

"I met almost every day and sometimes often with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting

Woman tells racial harassment woes

For much of the nearly two years Mrs. Atenogenesa Espinosa and her family have lived in Buffalo Grove, they have been subjected to a chain of nightmarish events. The Filipino woman took her grievance to the village board Monday night, and her type-written letter told the tale of harassment, which began during August, 1974. One morning she found spilled garbage under her parked car on the driveway, and that incident was followed by more vandalism, including racial slurs scrawled throughout a bedroom. Village Pres. Edward A. Fabish apologized on behalf of the village and added a police investigation is being conducted.

Charged with hit, run

A Rolling Meadows youth was arrested by police Tuesday after allegedly running down a Des Plaines youth in Elk Grove Village with his car. David J. Kendziora, 17, of 2203 School Dr., faces three charges by Elk Grove Village police. He is charged with failure to yield the right-of-way to a pedestrian, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and aggravated battery. A bond hearing is scheduled for early today in Elk Grove branch of Circuit Court. Elk Grove police said Kendziora reportedly ran down Steven C. Butzen, 17, of 181 W. Millers Rd., Des Plaines, after an argument over a firecracker-throwing incident on Ill. Rte. 53.

Witnesses told police Butzen was a passenger in a car driven by a Des Plaines man southbound on Rte. 33. Someone in Kendziora's car allegedly threw firecrackers at the car in which Butzen was riding.

The driver then chased Kendziora's car northbound on Rte. 53 into Elk Grove Village and caught up with the car at Nerge Road and Parker Place. Butzen jumped out of the car to confront Kendziora, who reportedly ran over Butzen and fled. Butzen was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center and is being treated for injuries to his head and body.

Rolling Meadows police apprehended Kendziora at his home early Tuesday night. The arrest was based on witnesses' descriptions of the car and driver.

State sues circus owners

A temporary restraining order has been issued to protect money raised by the Schaumburg Lions Club at a circus Monday after the Illinois Attorney General's office filed suit against the circus owners. Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott charged owners of the Carson and Barnes Circus Co. with forcing the Schaumburg Lions Club into an illegal contract. Scott said the contract is a "clear violation" of Illinois charitable trust laws, which state charities must receive at least 75 per cent of gross receipts from such events.

Under the contract signed by the Lions Club, the circus would receive 100 per cent of all revenues from concessions; 80 per cent of revenue from reserved seat tickets sold by the circus on circus day; 50 per cent of revenue from all tickets sold in advance of circus day, and 30 per cent of all special child tickets sold in advance. The circus also would receive 25 per cent for advance promotional representatives or 75 per cent of tickets sold in advance by the Lions Club.

Pay dispute settled

Arlington stage set to reopen

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Arlington Park Theatre announced Tuesday it has ended a financial dispute with actor John Carradine that led to a bad-check charge against the theater producer. It also was announced the theater will reopen next week.

The curtain will rise Tuesday night on the Midwest premier of "In Praise of Love," the first production at Arlington Park since the theater closed unexpectedly in April. It will star Tammy Grimes and Michael Allison.

Also announced was a second production for the following week starring English actress Lynn Redgrave. She will open Sept. 2 in "Two of Us," four 1-acts in which she plays a variety of roles.

THE REOPENING ends a four-month hiatus while a new lease agreement was worked out among David Lonn, producer and managing director of the theater, KEEP Productions Inc., and Arlington Park Towers Hotel Corp.

Carradine recently charged Lonn with writing bad salary checks in payment for his performance last spring in "Arsenio and Old Lace."

He dropped a theft complaint against Lonn after receiving a cashier's check for the difference not covered by a $22,000 bond placed with Actors Equity to insure payment of his salary for that production.

A warrant for Lonn's arrest has not been issued "in order to give him (Lonn) a chance to settle," said a spokesman for State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

JOHN VAN EYCK, Midwest regional director for Actor's Equity, told The Herald Tuesday that Lonn still must settle contributions to the actors' pension and retirement fund, and salaries of some other actors.

A spokesman for Lonn, however, said certified checks for all outstanding debts were in the mail Tuesday.

Though the theater was originally scheduled to reopen this week, difficulties in booking a suitable show and getting the theater back in working order, were the only reasons it did not, said the theater spokesman.

Announcement of "In Praise of Love" came late Tuesday afternoon. It runs only through Sunday, Aug. 31.

"TWO OF US" written by Michael Frayn, is being directed by John Clark, Miss Redgrave's husband with lighting and set design by Neil Peter Jampolis, both of whom have worked with Lonn in productions at Arlington Park Theatre.

Gift certificates held over from when the theater unexpectedly closed in April, remain good one year from the theater's reopening date, Aug. 26.

Miss Redgrave will also be here for one week only, through Sept. 7.

Freight derails, delays riders

Chicago and North Western Ry. commuter trains were delayed up to a half hour Tuesday morning because of a freight train derailment in Fox River Grove.

The derailment, which involved five freight cars hauling sand and gravel from South Beloit, Ill., occurred about 6:50 p.m. Monday, blocking east and westbound tracks Monday evening, a spokesman for the Chicago and North Western Ry. said.

The westbound track was cleared in time for the Tuesday morning rush hour, and Chicago-bound trains were switched to that track in the morning, causing the delays, the spokesman, said.

An investigation is under way.

How Much Cost?

by Ed Landwehr

Changing from black and white TV to color brings up the question — how much more electricity does it take?

If your TV set is turned on the national average of five hours each day and you have a solid state set, you will use 37 kilowatt hours monthly. If you still have the tube type, figure about 55 KWH. When you had the old black & white TV, you used only 10 for the average. Of course, if you're a big electricity user with an electric range, heater and air conditioner, etc., each KWH will cost less as you total them. You can figure the exact dollar and cents cost from your electric rate sheet.

And when you phone 255-0700 for maintenance service, you'll discover that Landwehr's Home Appliances, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights does the kind of accurate servicing that lasts the longest. Try us next time.

Court action threatened

Labor balks at loading U.S. grain to Russia

By United Press International
Complying with an AFL-CIO boycott of American grain bound for Russia, longshoremen in Houston refused to load two ships Tuesday but a federal judge ordered them back to work Wednesday while the legal issues are sorted out.

President Ford meantime condemned the work stoppage and said the federal government will seek ways to settle the problem.

The refusal to load the ships, the first major work stoppage since the boycott was imposed last month, came amid indications more Soviet-purchased grain soon would arrive for loading at many eastern ports.

And it angered farmers as grain prices dropped and the prospect loomed of further drops if a serious bottleneck develops in marketing their crops.

The AFL-CIO boycott was called on grounds the Ford administration had given insufficient assurances the Soviet grain sales will not drive up food prices for Americans.

U.S. District Judge James Noel ordered the longshoremen back to work Wednesday morning while a hearing is held on enjoining further work stoppages. The injunction was sought by grain shippers and freight agents.

Questioned by reporters in Minneapolis, Ford said he would review the possibility of executive action to get the longshoremen to load the grain. He said he would discuss it with Labor Secretary John Dunlop when he returns to Washington from Colorado next week.

Judge Noel at first attempted to get the longshoremen to voluntarily resume work, but when they refused he issued his order. One party seeking the injunction was the West Gulf Maritime Association, representing a number of shippers.

The association argued that the longshoremen were violating their contract to load the grain and essentially participating in an illegal strike. Willie Wells, president of International Longshoremen's Association Local 1273 in Houston, said his members stopped work under an agreement by the AFL-CIO maritime unions that none of the nearly 10 million tons of grain sold to the Russians since July 1 should be loaded.

A spokesman at the ILA headquarters in New York City said loading would not resume on either of the ships at Houston unless it could be determined that the grain on the dock was sold prior to July 1.

An AFL-CIO spokesman meanwhile disclosed the railway unions have reported that Russian-bought grain is currently being loaded onto railroad cars headed for eastern ports — a sign that more work stoppages can be expected soon on other docks.

AFL-CIO President George Meany announced the boycott will not be lifted unless administration officials come to him with assurances the grain sales will not boost domestic food prices.

FELLOW STRIKING police officers place San Francisco policeman Walter Pinosky on stretcher after he and another officer sustained undetermined injuries when a motorist ran them down. A Judge ordered the policemen back to duty Tuesday, but the officers defied the order. Mayor Joseph Alioto also threatened to fire policemen who refuse to return to work.

band loved life. It seemed to love him also. He was awed by the beauty of the flower and the spoken word. He could cultivate them as no other man could. His flowers continue to grow. His words still echo."

The President ended his remarks with the comment: "Yes, Louella, his words still echo."

Among those on the stage were Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill.; Dirksen's son-in-law, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and his wife, Joy; Dirksen's twin brother, Thomas, of Pekin; former Reps. Leslie Arends of Illinois and Charles Halleck of Indiana; Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Iowa, and Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., who entered the House in 1933 with Dirksen.

Later in the day, in Peoria, Ford said he does not think busing pupils to achieve racial balance in public schools is the proper way to get quality education.

Ford made the statement in response to a question by a delegate to a White House conference on domestic policy and the economy.

His reply won applause from the delegates.

The busing issue was raised by a delegate from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"The objective is to get quality education," Ford said. "There must be a better way to do it. We'll carry out the law, but there is a better way."

Ford did not say what that way was.

His questioner also had charged that race relations were being "pushed under the rug" by the Ford administration.

"I respectfully disagree that race relations are being pushed under the rug in this administration," Ford said.

Ford told the gathering "We're doing the best we can" to solve the unemployment problem and lamented that the economy is not something that can be turned on and off at will.

Ford's day began in Minneapolis, where he issued a double warning to the Russians — hands off Portugal if they value detente, and negotiate a strategic arms agreement or face a multi-billion-dollar U.S. buildup of nuclear arms.

The President told cheering Legionnaires he will have to ask Congress for $2 to $3 billion in additional nuclear weapons if the United States does not reach a strategic arms accord with the Soviets.

And he warned that any interference in the internal affairs of turbulent Portugal would endanger detente.

The President, addressing 7,500 delegates at the Legion's annual convention, vowed to keep America's defenses second to none and warned that attacks on American intelligence activities must not be permitted to lead to "tomorrow's Pearl Harbor."

Tuesday night, Ford boarded his "Spirit of '76" jet and returned to Vail, Colo.

Soviets urge Portuguese solidarity

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda called Tuesday for a display of "massive solidarity" with the Portuguese Communists, ignoring a U.S. warning to the Kremlin against trying to influence Portuguese events.

The call came in a lengthy article signed "Observer," a signature indicating it reflected the views of the highest echelon of the government and party leadership.

It was the strongest Soviet call yet for support of the Portuguese Communists, who, Pravda said, were battling "reactionary forces" backed by NATO nations.

"None of the fighters for democracy and against the Fascist menace, none of the genuine friends of the Portuguese people can ignore the intrigues of the reactionaries in that country," Pravda said.

"It is now most important to show massive solidarity with the political forces in Portugal who are waging a persistent and difficult struggle against attacks from the reactionary elements inside and outside the country."

"It is now important to support the Communists of Portugal who — as it was indicated in the election campaign political program of the Portuguese Communist party — respect, and will continue to respect, the wishes of the people and will fight any attempt to distort them."

The article was published five days after Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, in a speech in Birmingham, Ala., warned the Soviet Union against attempting to influence events in Portugal. He said it would be inconsistent with the declaration on European security signed recently in Helsinki.

President Ford, in a speech to the American Legion national convention in Minneapolis, said the Soviets would endanger detente by interfering in Portugal.

Excerpts of the Pravda article were carried at length by the Tass news agency, indicating the importance attached to it. It did not mention the European security conference at Helsinki or East-West detente.

In Lisbon, meantime, a Communist-called general strike collapsed in an outbreak of fistfights Tuesday. In Porto, the Communists canceled a mass rally in the face of mounting violent opposition and the ouster of a leftist military commander.

The 30-minute general strike, organized by the Communists and backed personally by Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves, provoked fist fights and brawls in downtown Lisbon but was largely ignored in the rest of the country.

The Communists issued a statement canceling their rally in the northern industrial city of Porto, an opposition stronghold, for "technical reasons" after it was reported that the left-wing military commander of the northern region, Brig. Eurico Corvacho, had been forced to resign at the demand of his troops.

The statement said Corvacho's ouster "could lead to a major confrontation."

Hoffa photograph seen as 'cruel joke' by son

DETROIT (UPI) — A photograph of missing former Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa and a handicapped Florida businessman were mailed to United Press International and Hoffa's son Tuesday. Young Hoffa called it a "cruel joke."

The pictures created a stir before it was determined they were taken about one week to 10 days before Hoffa vanished July 30 in a Detroit suburb.

Police sources said the businessman, C. Monroe Lerman of Orlando, Fla., admitted to FBI agents that he mailed the photographs himself. The FBI planned to question Lerman to find out why he did so.

The picture showed a smiling Hoffa standing behind Lerman, who was sitting in a wheelchair.

Hoffa's lawyer son, James P. Hoffa, called the incident a "cruel joke" and said he could not understand why anyone would exploit the family's emotions by doing it.

Lerman's attorney, Ed Kirkland of Orlando, said Lerman and Hoffa met late in July to discuss formation of a national union for handicapped persons and that the photos were taken at that time by Lerman's wife.

Kirkland said the photograph of Hoffa pushing Lerman was taken outside an Orlando restaurant following a dinner meeting between Mr. and Mrs. Hoffa and Lerman.

Kirkland said he could not pin down the exact date of that meeting and the photograph, but said he would do so Wednesday following a meeting with local FBI agents.

"Someone indicated it was in early April, but I think it was later than that," Kirkland said. "It was over two or three months ago. I think it was somewhere in June. My recollection is that it was in the latter part of June and it was long before Hoffa vanished."

Report Egypt-Israeli peace pact OK

by United Press International
An Israeli parliamentary leader announced Tuesday that Egypt and Israel had reached tentative agreement on a three-year non-aggression pact as part of a Middle East interim settlement in the Sinai.

Yitzhak Navon, chairman of Israel's parliamentary Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, revealed sections of the proposed treaty on national television but said 20 clauses must still be kept secret.

"I favor this agreement because it is good for the Jews," he said.

He said Egypt and Israel will agree to pursue further means to reach an overall peace, and that the accord will go into effect as soon as it is signed.

He said the pact is in three parts, including a direct agreement between Israel and Egypt, an indirect accord by both sides through the United States and an agreement between Israel and the United States.

Navon did not mention anything about how far Israel will withdraw in Sinai, how far Egyptian forces will advance, or whether American civilian technicians will be manning spy installations in and near the Mitla and Gidi mountain passes in Sinai.

The announcement came as Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger held last-minute negotiations in Washington to nail down an agreement before Kissinger's next Middle East diplomatic peace shuttle begins Wednesday.

Announcing other elements of the pact, Navon said Israel and Egypt will extend the U.N. mandate in the Sinai annually, establish a joint committee to supervise the truce and troop withdrawals, and permit Israeli cargo to sail through the Suez Canal.

He said both sides have agreed the pact is to be considered as one step on the road to a full peace, with a final peace settlement to be negotiated at Geneva.

Twelve clauses in the pact dealing with the agreement between the United States and Israel must be kept secret but "they are positive for Israel," Navon said.

The section contains clauses providing for U.S. political backing of Israel and a guarantee of special oil supplies during wartime, Navon said. It calls for the establishment of reserve oil stockpiles for an extended period.

Filth in some baby foods reported

Tests on major brands of baby food showed small amounts of insects, insect parts and rodent hairs, Consumers Union reported. It also said it found paint chips in some of the foods from enamel which flaked off the lid. The amounts of filth was not considered high enough to pose a health hazard, but the organization said the FDA should take immediate action.

"The foods with filth included: Beech-Nut peas, Beech-Nut chicken and chicken broth, Gerber vegetables and beef dinner, Beech-Nut turkey and rice with vegetables dinner, Gerber bananas with tapioca, Beech-Nut applesauce, Gerber applesauce, Heinz applesauce, Heinz orange juice and Heinz apple juice." The "worst offender" for the enamel chip problem, CU said, was Beech-Nut beef with vegetables and cereal.

Slayton, 51, was one of the three Apollo astronauts who breathed nitrogen tetroxide fumes July 24 during the final minutes of their return to Earth from a historic joint flight in orbit with two Soviet Soyuz cosmonauts. A National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman said, however, the lesion apparently existed undetected before the flight, and did not result from inhaling the toxic fumes.

Prospect may drop from state plan

by LYNN ASINOF

Financial considerations may force Mount Prospect to drop out of a group of five towns being considered for a state program which would help with the redevelopment of their central business districts.

However, officials from Arlington Heights, Palatine and Des Plaines said Tuesday they are still very interested in the program, which is estimated to cost each community around $2,500. Wilmette is the fifth community considering the program.

The state program is being developed to test a new manual prepared to help towns with downtown revitalization. Through the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, the state would hire a planner to be used in all of the participating communities to provide expertise during redevelopment.

THE STATE IS putting $10,000 towards the $22,500 project, with the participating communities sharing the remainder of the expense.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said it is "very doubtful in my mind that we will participate" because funds are not available in the budget to finance the program.

Eppley said he had hoped the village could provide its share of the expense with "in-kind services" such as office space.

Robert L. Scott of the department of local government affairs, said the program just will not work without monetary contributions from the participating villages.

"It's hard to understand how in-kind really could cover all of one's local share of the contract," Scott said of the program. "We're talking about hiring a planner. We are talking about dollars that have to be spent in hiring a person."

SCOTT SAID TALKS with the villages are still tentative, but estimated contracts with participating towns will be signed by the end of September.

Arlington Heights officials also are hoping to meet their commitment to the program by offering in-kind rather than financial contributions.

"We're very interested in the program," said Joe Kesler, Arlington Heights village planner. "The only problem is the village must provide funds and we're in the middle of the budget year."

Kesler said the village may try to work out a combination money, staff-time and office space contribution to the program. "I'm sure we'll be in it one way or the other," he said.

Des Plaines officials are interested in the program, although Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning, said he has not yet discussed monetary matters with the mayor and city council.

RICHARDSON SAID the program would be most valuable by providing market analysis and shopper surveys to find out what types of business the city should attract to the downtown area.

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said the village is interested in the program and has informally discussed contributing between $3,000 and $5,000, depending on "the type of program." He said the village also reserves the right to back out of the program.

Jones said the village needs a detailed market analysis of each of the downtown areas. "I see it is a very necessary situation prior to the next step of passing a downtown redevelopment ordinance," he said, noting the program would be worth it if Palatine could get its market analysis as a result.

State sues circus to get more funds for Lions Club

by LINDA PUNCH

A temporary restraining order has been issued to protect money raised by the Schaumburg Lions Club at a circus Monday after the Illinois Attorney General's office filed suit against the circus owners.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott charged the owners of the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., an Oklahoma-based company, with forcing the Schaumburg Lions Club into an illegal contract. Scott said the contract is a "clear violation" of Illinois charitable trust laws which require charities to receive at least 75 per cent of gross receipts from such events.

The temporary restraining order prevents Moore Equipment Co. Inc., which does business as the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., from removing any funds raised from the bank or the state. Scott also is seeking to nullify the contract and obtain more money for the Lions Club.

DONALD MULACK, chief of the Charitable Trust Division, said the state is trying to have all the money solicited under the contract impounded until "we can find out how much is due the charity."

The state will also ask the court to prohibit the circus from doing business for charitable organizations in Illinois if "we find any fraud in the accounting of the circus," Mulack said.

Under the contract signed by the Schaumburg Lions Club, the circus would receive 100 per cent of all revenue from concessions; 90 per cent of revenue from reserved seat tickets sold by the circus on circus day; 50 per cent of revenue from all tickets sold in advance of circus day; and 50 per cent of all special child tickets sold in advance. The circus would also receive 25 per cent for advance promotional representatives or 75 per cent of tickets sold in advance by the Lions Club.

Scott's suit charges the circus with "committing a fraud on the Illinois public by purporting to raise money for charity when, in fact, most of the money will go to the fund-raisers (circus)."

MULACK SAID A review of out-of-state professional fund raisers, such as the Carson and Barnes Circus, showed the groups "take a disproportionate amount of money for themselves — 10 to 15 per cent." He said the Schaumburg Lions were probably receiving "less than 10 per cent."

Jack Holmes, a spokesman for the Schaumburg Lions Club, said his group was not aware the contract violated state law.

"We had the identical contract last year and no one said a word," he said.

about $2,200 on last year's circus but would probably break even this year because of poor attendance.

SIX OTHER ILLINOIS charitable organizations entered into identical contracts with Carson and Barnes, including the Libertyville Jaycees. These contracts also will be covered in the suit.

The Carson and Barnes circus also performed in Wheeling Aug. 5 to 8 at an event sponsored by the Cook County Police Assn. A CCPA spokesman said his group rented the circus for a flat fee and were not involved in splitting concession and reserved ticket fees.

The hearing for the preliminary injunction will be at 2 p.m. Friday before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen.

May lower kindergarten age limit

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 is considering allowing children born between Dec. 1 and March 1 to enter kindergarten early.

Currently, children must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1, 1975, to enter kindergarten this year. The school board Monday directed the administration to look into the possibility of letting up to 20 children enroll in kindergarten this year who will turn 5 after the Dec. 1 deadline.

Supt. Roger Bardwell said the administration has received several requests from parents who want their children to enter kindergarten a year early. He said they feel their children are mature enough to start kindergarten, although their youngsters were born after the Dec. 1 deadline.

BARDWELL SAID the program would not cost additional money this year, although the district will not receive state aid for children born after the Dec. 1 deadline. He said the district can place up to 20 youngsters into classes already set for this year.

Toni Kane, learning disability teacher at Byrd School, Elk Grove Village, said she has reservations about the program, because "many parents feel their children are ready when they're not."

Several parents Monday spoke in favor of the program, saying an arbitrary date should not determine who is ready for kindergarten.

Darrell Crouch, 2011 Scott Terr., Mount Prospect, said: "We'd at least like to have the chance to have them accepted rather than have an arbitrary age level. If they're ready, they should go." He has a child whose birthday falls between the extension dates.

THE BOARD is waiting to see what response the district gets before approving the program. If the response is too great, Bardwell said it might not be possible to implement the program this year because of the limited number of openings. The board will decide on the program at the Sept. 2 meeting.

Parents interested in the program, who have children becoming 5 between Dec. 1 and March 1, 1976, should write a letter to the administration by Sept. 2. The letter should explain why they believe their youngster is ready to enter kindergarten early, said Bardwell.

The child and parents will be interviewed by a group of psychologists and kindergarten teachers to determine whether the child is mature enough to enter kindergarten early. If the program is approved, parents will be notified about their child's acceptance by Sept. 15.

Pregnant women need vitamin-rich diet

I am trying to get pregnant and would also like to lose about 10 pounds. I would like to try a diet on which I am supposed to take elder vinegar, lecithin, kelp and vitamin B-6. Would any of these be harmful to the fetus.

The biggest harm to your fetus will not come from the elder vinegar, lecithin, kelp or vitamin B-6, but from the things you will need in your diet during pregnancy that you will not get.

I am opposed to anyone dieting on any regime during a pregnancy except under the careful supervision and on the advice of her doctor.

During a pregnancy you need added protein to enable the developing fetus to form the many body structures made from amino acids of protein. You need more calcium, because the baby's skeleton must be formed. You need more iron because the baby must form blood with red blood cells that contain hemoglobin made with iron.

The developing baby will take a lot of vitamins it needs from the mother, leading to vitamin deficiency in the mother if she is not obtaining sufficient amounts.

In all I can't think of a worse time for a woman to go on a diet than during a pregnancy, unless she has a medical reason to need to do so, such as evidence of toxemia of pregnancy.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

You need a lot more than vitamin B-6 and lecithin to help a healthy baby develop and maintain your own health.

In your column you stated that it was common to give extra potassium to a patient taking a diuretic since loss of potassium can lead to irregularities of the heart and that is my problem. Irregularity of the heart beat.

I am 63 years old and have been taking Digiloxin and a 500 mg Diuril tablet daily since 1966 for atrial fibrillation. I have never had potassium prescribed to take with the diuretic. Why not?

Not everyone taking a diuretic or digitals needs potassium. It depends on whether too much potassium is washed out of the body through the kidneys and how much potassium you get in your diet.

One Diuril tablet a day will not eliminate as much potassium and sodium as three tablets a day so that is part of the answer.

You may also have enough fruit in your diet to provide a significant amount of potassium daily.

Atrial fibrillation can be caused from many different things, including loss of potassium, an overactive thyroid, pneumonia, a heart attack, arteriosclerotic heart disease and even birth defects of the heart. So don't assume that your atrial fibrillation is from a low potassium level.

Many doctors give potassium with both digitals and diuretics when the kidneys are functioning normally. Then if there is a low level the potassium corrects it. If not the excess potassium is then eliminated by the kidneys.

Herald opinion

We're victims of RTA abuses

The Regional Transportation Authority increasingly is becoming what its critics feared it would be: a powerful agency catering to the transportation needs of the City of Chicago and neglecting its responsibility for suburban mass transit.

We have, in the past, repeatedly pointed out the need for a broadly based agency dealing with the problems of mass transportation throughout the metropolitan area. The current RTA is not such an agency.

Last week it was demonstrated once again that suburban interests are treated with callous disregard while measures benefiting the Chicago Transit Authority receive primary consideration. Consider these developments:

- In line with its partial funding of suburban line deficits, while providing 100 per cent support to the CTA, the RTA is placing the North Suburban Mass Transit District (NOR-TRAN) in the same pathetic scramble for funds which has characterized suburban mass transit for years.

The system's $522,200 deficit is going to have to be paid from local funds, because the NOR-TRAN fares do not pay at least 65 per cent of its operating costs. Local officials are understandably outraged.

- RTA chairman Milton Pikarsky has tightened his control over the RTA board, victimizing suburban interests.

Last week Pikarsky gained sole authority to hire staff members and consultants at salaries up to $30,000. He also is no longer required to notify the board of staff vacancies, and a board personnel committee has been abolished.

Both of these steps were predictable, for the RTA during its life has grown increasingly disinterested in suburban needs. Those cynics who have regarded it merely as a tool to prop up the CTA and Chicago's needs appear to have been right.

There are remedies available to correct the RTA's abuses. The starting point should be the General Assembly, which created the RTA. Until it rebuilds the RTA and permits power to be shared between Chicago and the rest of the metropolitan area, the RTA will be little more than a rubber stamp for the way Mayor Richard J. Daley sees this area's transportation needs.

The need for the RTA is obvious, for there are 7 million people in the Chicago metropolitan area who are going to have to rely more and more on mass transit. But the RTA can only be effective if it acknowledges that the suburbs are just as important as Chicago in planning for the present and future of area mass transportation.

Keep skin flicks off
those outdoor screens

Under pressure of court action by the state's attorney's office, the owners of the 53 Outdoor Theater, Palatine Township, have decided to discontinue the showing of sexually explicit movies on a screen facing U.S. Rte. 12.

Only general interest films will be shown on that screen; the theater's owners plan to build two new screens, less visible to the public, for the showing of X-rated fare.

The Herald has contended for many years that outdoor theater screens, visible to the general public, are not the proper place to show skin flicks. We do not believe anyone should be subjected to sexually explicit scenes who does not deliberately choose to view them. Nor should they be broadcast for the eyes of children; even the film industry, intent on producing whatever will sell, recognizes this through its age-related ratings code.

We don't think the 53 Outdoor Theater should be showing X-rated films on any screen, unless its owners are prepared to build a high wall around the entire viewing area.

Nonetheless, the decision to halt the "entertainment" of Rand Road motorists is a step in the right direction. The decision may have been made for the wrong reasons, it may be too limited and it may be years too late, but we must applaud it anyway.

EDITORIAL: The failure — and future — of downtown development in Arlington Heights.

Council questions oil policy

The recent passage of the bill to extend price controls on all crude oil produced domestically until March 31, 1976, represents yet another step by our federal lawmakers in the wrong direction.

The dual objectives of solving the energy problem and reaching energy self-sufficiency in the U.S. will not be reached by measures that discourage domestic exploration and investment by the private sector in developing U.S. petroleum reserves.

Presently, President Ford is expected to veto the extension bill. When the Congress returns it will be faced with the choice of whether to sustain such a veto or to override it. The action of the Congress will have a serious effect on the immediate future of domestic petroleum supplies and exploration activity. If the veto is overridden, we can expect domestic exploration to continue to drop off and the situation of petroleum dependency, i.e., our reliance on foreign produced crude oil, to increase. If, however, price controls are lifted on Sept. 1, the incentive for domestic exploration and ultimate production will be provided.

According to a recent Harris Survey conducted in July and published earlier this month, public support for decontrol has risen to a decisive 54 to 22 per cent majority. I believe this turn around in public opinion of control over petroleum prices comes through the realization that adequate domestic supplies will only come about through economic incentives and competition in the free market place. Products artificially priced below market levels will soon run in short supply.

We think the Harris survey's findings are extraordinarily important. Such public sentiment comes at a time when the nation is again at an "energy crossroad." We respectfully suggest that your paper editorially call attention to this fact and give your support to immediate decontrol and a return to a free market for petroleum products. The Illinois Petroleum Council will be happy to supply you with any further information you may desire.

letters to the editor

A 'powerful display'?

In a recent Fence Post letter, Abner Mikva said it was people power in his behalf that convinced state legislators in the 10th District to oppose the Democratic congressional remap plan.

Nonsense. The 45 letters I received were appreciated but could hardly be termed a powerful display of popular support for Abner.

Although technical arguments can be made to the contrary, it was never intended that redistricting be accomplished more often than every 10 years — and then only to insure the equivalence of voting rights. Certainly, mere control of the General Assembly, mid-decennial, confers no such power on Abner's party. Neither would it upon mine.

Furthermore, it would be totally improper to use redistricting to affect a change in representation. That is a right reserved to the people on election day.

My decision, as most others, to oppose redistricting was made on the basis of the proposal's obvious injustice, not upon the personalities of the moment nor upon any imagined groundswell of popular support.

A reader's view

I am somewhat tardy in addressing myself to the article you printed some days ago with the headline "Graham Favors Ordaining Qualified Homosexuals." Do not be mistaken, I appreciate your paper. However, it appears that too frequently you have to work at getting a sensational headline even if it is at the expense of the people concerning whom you are writing. Please permit me to qualify "Qualified Homosexuals" in behalf of my good friend Billy Graham.

I am positive that Mr. Graham meant that should a homosexual be converted he would no longer be indulging in homosexual activities and, therefore, would no longer be a homosexual. Your article, being very brief, does not qualify properly the news item and certainly not the headline which I believe is very regrettable. I realize that the original news release was very unlikely yours, but in that you have printed it in this way I wish to register my complaint.

Mission Impossible?

Reagan ponders race

by ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON — According to Ronald Reagan's campaign strategists, there are four strong reasons why it would be "impossible or close to it" for their man to beat Gerald Ford for the Republican presidential nomination next year.

John Sears, Reagan's young but battle-tested organizer, recently laid out for a group of reporters the conventional wisdom that argues against a 1976 campaign by the former California governor. He also gave a similar list of reasons why Reagan might just be able to pull it off.

Sears' list of formidable advantages usually enjoyed by incumbent presidents included the control of events as the head of government, an almost total command of media attention, access to the best in staff assistance and the existence of a ready-made political organization from previous campaigns.

As the Reagan people look at these strong points, they see several soft spots that they believe make a race against Ford feasible.

First, the question of a built-in national campaign organization. Presidents, or even former vice presidents who have been elected to their offices, obviously have this advantage. But Ford has never run for national office. They believe Reagan, while never a national candidate, certainly was better or at least as well known to rank and file Republicans as Ford before the Agnew and Nixon resignations.

Second, the advantage of incumbency itself. The fact of holding public office is believed by politicians to be invaluable, inasmuch as the incumbent can act to deal with problems rather than just give speeches about solutions. Furthermore, party loyalists are believed to be reluctant to admit that their judgment in the previous election was wrong and likely adopt the "don't change horses" philosophy.

As noted, the second of these elements does not exist with Ford. Republicans never nominated or elected him President before and so they don't have to justify themselves by supporting him again.

As for the advantage of "controlling events," the Reagan strategists think the reality of "being in charge" at this particular time in the nation's life may not be such an asset for any politician. As it apparently was in 1974, there may be an advantage in the next presidential election for a candidate who has absolutely no past connection with "the mess in Washington."

Sears concedes that Ford does enjoy the other two advantages of incumbency — lots of publicity and lots of high-grade advice.

Reagan, out of public office since the end of 1972, does get more attention than a complete unknown, but it is nothing like the overwhelming attention Ford can count on. And Ford, as President, has access to the vast resources of the federal government and just about the pick of those he what novel view of a car on it side. I'm sure that this type of picture will encourage further abuses of this sort.

Why not publish a picture of my automobile's $300 worth of "minor damage"?

Roger M. Schiavoni
Arlington Heights

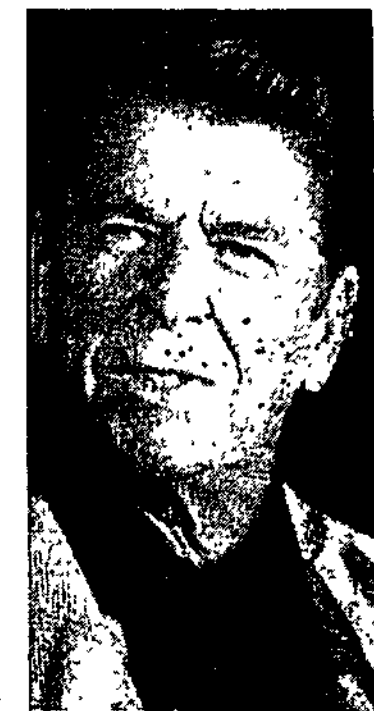

wants to work for him. Reagan generally must rely on volunteers.

Sears did not entertain a rebuttal of his analysis of Ford's possible weaknesses, but certainly one could be made.

For example, while Ford never has been a candidate in a national election, he was a fantastically active Republican campaigner during his days in Congress and has long standing political links in states far removed from his Michigan base.

Secondly, Ford obviously has some things going for him as the man in charge of the country, regardless of any national mood of disgust with politicians.

Gas dealers test strategies to bring back customers

by LEA TONKIN

There was a time when most service stations in the Northwest suburbs and other U.S. markets relied on the routine formula of fill 'er up, check the oil and wash the windows to keep the customers happy.

Now, as times and markets are changing, gasoline retailers are trying various strategies to meet the competition, said Jack Shanks, Shell Oil Co.'s Chicago area sales manager, based in Des Plaines.

Shanks said the recent trend toward innovative service stations featuring groceries and car washes alongside the gasoline pumps are attempts to give the customers what they want.

"The consumer out there — he's still king," Shanks said. He adds that dramatic changes in gasoline price and supply within the past two years spawned a "different type of consumer." Major-brand dealers used to offer full-service, Shanks said, comparing the outlets to independent service stations that traditionally have provided a no-frills approach.

"What's happened in the last couple of years is that the distinction has become blurred," Shanks said. "Now most major oil companies have experimented with some type of no-frills operations, as Shell's gas-only service stations with no bays for service."

THE GAMES, the give-aways and the expensive extras may be gone. "But there will always be a demand for traditional service facilities," Shanks predicts.

Shell is building outlets that offer gas and car washes only as a step up from the no-frills approach of two pumps on a gravel lot, Shanks said. "You want a nice-looking unit. That is what the consumer wants," Shanks said.

Motorists are also looking for bargain pump prices, Shanks said. A number of major oil companies lost sales within the past year to independent stations selling relatively cheap fuel. As customer loyalty faded, some major marketers pulled out of the Chicago area.

THE COMBINATION of gasoline sales and a small grocery is the way to go, says Bob Watson. He is the manager of the Citgo Quik Mart, 900 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Elk Grove Village.

"It seems to me that what we're going to see in the future is a wave of places to buy your gasoline that are not conventional service stations," Shanks said. "Those remaining will grow into larger service stations." Shell is experimenting with a 'do-it-yourself' repair station in Detroit.

The notion that it takes more than an appeal to customer loyalty to survive in the gasoline sales business is seconded by Bill Knoedler, manager of the Shell station at 517 Mall Dr., Schaumburg. "The whole thing is that we have the car wash here to attract people to buy gasoline," he said of the station.

KNOEDLER SAID it's important to offer competitive gasoline prices to the customer. Image and good service are also important, he said.

"There aren't any more bargains in gasoline prices," he said. "In order to compete for customers, you're going to have to emphasize service to the customer and quality products.

Oil companies are experimenting with more different types of outlets more than they ever have before," said Brice Cecil, director of marketing for the American Petroleum Institute. Cecil said the "gas-and-go" type of station may serve customer needs in one area, "but different people at different times have different desires."

Customers want good service and economy, said Bob Watson, manager of the Citgo Quik Mart, 900 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Elk Grove Village. His station is a former service area and was converted within the past year to a small grocery outlet.

"We're in the business to make money, but we're not out to make a killing in a year," Watson said. He believes the Citgo switch from auto repair service to small food marts offers the appeal of economy and fast service to the consumer.

CUSTOMERS WILL continue to seek out the gas stations offering quality products, good service, and convenience, said David Abshear, public and governmental affairs representative for Standard Oil of Ind. (Amoco). "No sweeping changes" are proposed in company service station operations, Abshear said.

James Brawar, executive officer of the Illinois Service Station Operators Assn., said the trend toward "mini-service" and no-service stations may be halted if federal oil price controls are lifted Aug. 31.

"In a free market, full-service stations will be on an upgrade," he said. When the full-service station is allowed to meet the competition in price, the gas-for-less station that offers no service will start to lose customers, Brawar said.

Old West makes visit to Rolling Meadows

The Old West is restored again when West Fest comes to Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Thursday through Sunday, Aug. 21-24.

There will be dancing, entertainment, food, fun and bargains for all visitors to the shopping center on Kirchoff Rd., just east of Rt. 53.

Girl Scout Troop 71 "Indian Dancers" and Rolling Meadows High School Orchestras "Dance Hall Girls" will perform Thursday night.

Friday night the "Dance Hall Girls" will entertain again and there will also be square dancing under the direction of Paul "Fog" Thompson.

On Saturday visitors will enjoy the magic of Martene Martin and frolic to the music of the Li'l Richard Polka Band. On both Saturday and Sunday, various characters will be wandering the "street" — good guys and bad guys in impromptu gun fights and guitar players, all adding to the fun and excitement.

A carnival will tempt youngsters to try the latest rides, while sidewalk sales will tempt mothers with some great bargains. A drawing will be held each day for a 10-speed bicycle.

Near the Old West town will be booths offering beer, bratwurst, ice cream products and hot pretzels, sponsored by local groups. There will be a dunkin' booth sponsored by the Jaycees, a hockey game booth and a booth selling used books. The American Legion will sponsor three different game booths.

So plan to drop by Rolling Meadows Shopping Center this weekend and enjoy a taste of the Old West!

Lots of food

Bratwurst and beer are just several of the items available to feast on from booths at West Fest this weekend.

To quench the thirst you worked up during the day, the Rolling Meadows Hockey Club will be sponsoring a beer stand. The club will be selling foaming beer for 50 cents a glass.

Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce will sell bratwurst, sauerkraut and hot dogs, which will be sure to satisfy those hungry appetites.

For dessert, Rolling Meadows Jr. Woman's Club will be selling different types of ice cream products.

These booths will open at 11 a.m. until the end of the day's activities.

Prepare yourself for street roamers

Bang, Bang — and all of a sudden you see a fight in the street. It's probably one of the bad guys stirring up some excitement.

But don't be too scared — a good guy will probably show up to save the day. You'll find all sorts of impromptu excitement in the "street" during the West Fest festivities at Rolling Meadows Shopping Center.

Register for bike

You'll have a chance to win one of four ten-speed bicycles that will be given away during the West Fest days at Rolling Meadows Shopping Center.

A drawing for one bicycle will take place each night Thursday through Sunday. Coupons for the drawings will be available from the merchants in the center and can be deposited in the stores. No purchase is necessary and winners need not be present to win.

Four bicycles will be donated for the drawings.

Grab your cowboy hat

Straw cowboy hats will be on sale in the parking lot at Rolling Meadows Shopping Center for $1 during West Fest activities.

The hats will be sold at the food booth, sponsored by the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce.

She'll be acting out the greatest tricks the Old West has ever seen, from card tricks to disappearing acts. Martene has been seen on television stations in Boston, New York and Toronto in addition to her performances before large corporations and in night clubs.

Martene will be performing on Saturday during the West Fest weekend.

Imprinted mugs

Rolling Meadows Drug Store will feature thermo mugs that can be imprinted with your picture or favorite saying while-you-wait. A great souvenir of this year's West Fest, they'll sell for $2.

Pros, cons of controversial drug analysis projects

by KATHERINE BOYCE
(Last of a three-part series)

It is against the law to buy street drugs, and it is the job of the police to see that the law is enforced.

Yet it has become more and more apparent that the drug abuse problem cannot be ended by simply locking up all the pushers and drug users.

During the last several years, law enforcement agencies in the Chicago area have been taking a roundabout approach to attacking drug abuse through rehabilitation and educational programs.

One of the most controversial programs is drug analysis, through which a drug user can obtain free information on the contents of a drug from a local youth agency.

THE PURPOSE OF drug analysis is to show users the folly of taking illegal drugs, that the drugs obtained from pushers may contain harmless substances or, worse yet, that they may contain substances even more dangerous than the drugs they have been sold.

However, law enforcement officials in the Northwest suburbs have mixed feelings about the value of drug analysis. Some feel analysis actually may contribute to drug abuse.

"I'm opposed to these drug analysis centers," Harry Jenkins, Elk Grove Village police chief, said. "I would think," Jenkins said, "that drug analysis has the effect of 'supporting the abuse of drugs.'"

Recently, a drug analysis program was rejected by the board of directors of the Regional Youth Services Bureau which serves Palatine, Schaumburg and Elk Grove townships. Several of the directors share Jenkins' concern. They feel that analysis may encourage the use of drugs. At best, they say the program is still experimental and public agencies should not become involved until the value of drug analysis is proven.

PALATINE POLICE CHIEF Jerry Bratcher said he has mixed feelings about the value of a drug analysis program. The success of the program is dependent on "how tightly it is controlled," Bratcher said. An analysis program must be operated by a "legitimate" organization, he said, explaining that his feelings about drug analysis are "predicated on the organization that is overseeing this project."

But Bratcher is not ready to discard the idea of drug analysis. All forms of combating drug abuse should be investigated, he said. "It's awful easy to sit back and put thumbs down on a program without really looking into it," Bratcher said.

Drug analysis in the Chicago area has been monitored and coordinated by the Cook County sheriff's youth services department since the analysis program began more than two years ago.

Youth agencies that participate in the drug analysis program refer drug users, to one of five drop-off centers in Cook County. Users deposit the drugs anonymously, and the drugs are taken to G. D. Searle & Co. in Skokie, where they are tested. The results are sent to the drop-off centers and the youth agencies. Users call the agencies, usually within 48 hours, and obtain the results, along with some counseling.

According to the sheriff's office, drug analysis has five benefits:

- Prevents overdoses caused by impure or adulterated street drugs.
- Provides information on the contents of street drugs to hospitals so that overdoses can be treated more effectively.

- Provides local police with information on the types of drugs in use in the area.

- Provides parents with analysis of drugs found at home so that they can counsel youngsters on the danger of these drugs.

- Establishes trust and credibility between drug users and youth agencies for more effective counseling.

THE SHERIFF'S office keeps tabs on the program to make sure it conforms to the law and receives the cooperation of the law enforcement agencies involved, said Chuck Jahn, one of the sheriff's youth service workers.

The state's attorney has "granted his sanction not to prosecute those who are transporting drugs for analysis" from the drop-off centers to Searle labs, Jahn said and the sheriff's office also makes sure "the local police are aware of the program." Cooperation of local police is an "integral" part of the program, he said.

"The whole system is totally anonymous," Jahn said, yet there is "nothing that can legally stop any sort of police surveillance" of drop-off centers, which is one reason why police cooperation is so important. If police stake out the drop-off centers and arrest the drug users, the users will stop bringing drugs in for analysis and the purpose of the program will be defeated.

Jenkins points out that "surveillance of such a center could be done by anyone other than for law enforcement." He fears that the centers could be watched for extortion purposes. A drop-off center could present a serious crime problem, he said.

JENKINS QUESTIONS the role of police in such drug programs. He believes drug prevention should be the job of parents of youthful drug users. "There is no better counseling than you can get in the home," he said.

But Bratcher, although he has mixed feelings about drug analysis, feels that public agencies should be doing all they can to fight drug abuse. It is obvious that some of the "traditionalist approaches" simply "aren't working," he said, but no one has found a better way.

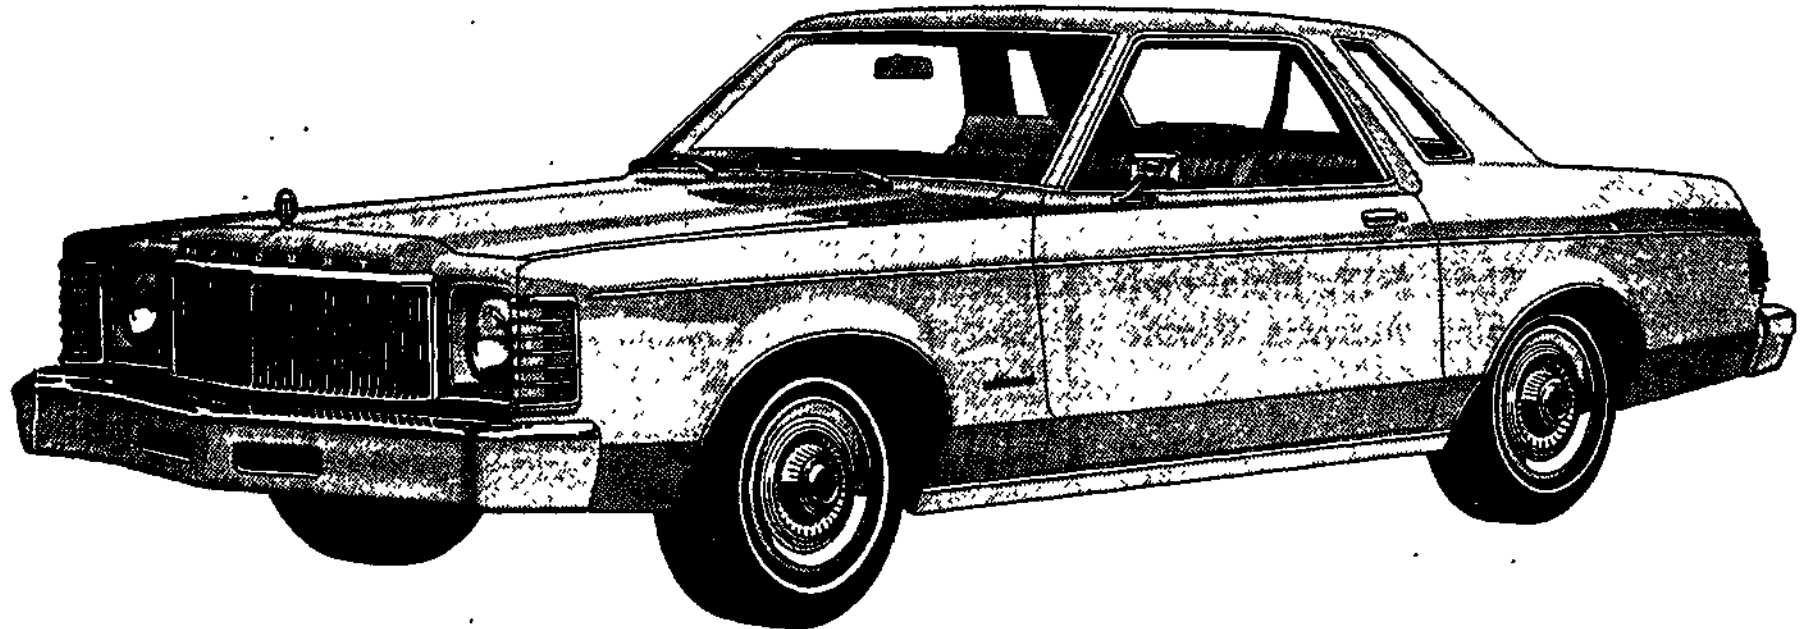

"I don't know of anyone who has come up with a real solution," he said.

Handicapped camp tour set Sunday

Northwest suburban residents may tour a camp for handicapped children operated by the Northwest Educational Cooperative.

The tour of Sunrise Lake Camp, Bartlett, will be part of an open house and dedication ceremony from 2-4 p.m. Sunday.

The camp, which was deeded to NEC by the state last year, has been a community project since the old lakefront camp was acquired. Volunteers reconstructed the camp and made it suitable for use by the handicapped. The practical architectural construction class at Forest View High School renovated the main portion of the buildings. Local school districts provided funds.

THE CAMP SERVES students from elementary school districts 15, 21, 23, 25, 26, 34, 57 and 59 and high school districts 211 and 214. This summer students participated in a variety of activities including swimming, hiking, nature study, fishing, rowing, crafts, cooking, lawn games and art.

Sunday's open house will include demonstrations of student activities, a tour of the buildings and grounds and refreshments. State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, will deliver the dedication address at 3 p.m.

The camp is one-quarter mile south of W. Bartlett Road on Ill. Rte. 59. Guests may drive but shuttle buses will leave the parking lot of Kirk Center, 520 S. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, at 1:15 p.m. and will return at 4:45 p.m. Guests wishing to reserve space on a bus should call NEC, 359-3110, before Friday.

Pedaling from New York to San Francisco

Scott Jacobsen's pulse rate counts out at 57 heartbeats per minute. Which means he's roughly 15 beats slower than the national average. Which could also mean he'll be pedaling cycles more years than the rest of us less hearty souls.

It's fortunate that Scott is so physically fit. Otherwise, he never could have endured that 4,100-mile bicycle trek from New York to San Francisco.

Which sounds like Scott might also be slightly bothered by too much riding in the sunshine. But I doubt it. Scott just enjoys riding. Also, he enjoys a good challenge.

And riding from New York City's Central Park to San Francisco's Golden Gate Park seemed an adequate challenge when Scott, who'll be a senior at the University of Oklahoma, first saw it mentioned in the campus paper last February.

It seemed the J.C. Penney and Colanese Fiber companies would sponsor 12 cycling collegians... who shall be forever remembered as The Pedaling Dozen. ... with bikes, other equipment, mechanics and even a "Sag Wagon" if they'd peddle the estimated 3,700 plus miles. (Somebody underestimated.)

The two American companies would derive public relations benefits from their joint effort. Each member of The Pedaling Dozen keeps all his/her equipment plus a $1,200 college scholarship. For Scott, who's been long distance riding about seven years, that's fun money.

It also enabled Scott, an Arlington High School grad in 1972, to meet his first scorpion. That social experience occurred outside Knolls, Utah.

"We sat there poking it with little blades of grass," Scott said Tuesday while reclining his 6-foot-6 frame in the family's Arlington Heights living room.

"The thing would thrust its tail forward. It looked so fragile, like anything could bust it wide open."

Scott's first trip of any consequence was seven years ago, while a freshman at Arlington, when he cycled to Diamond Lake just south of Mundelein, about 14 miles.

Forest View girls' swimming team has first meeting today

Candidates for this fall's Forest View High School girls' swimming team should report to the girls' gymnasium at 10 a.m., today, for an organizational meeting.

Parental permission and physical examination forms must be submitted before any athlete will be allowed to compete.

Coach Janice Kluge said the Falcon swimmers will train at Recreation Park. For additional information, contact coach Kluge at 255-3736.

Mike Klein
Staff Sportswriter

He's been a mad pedaler ever since across Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and while away at school, Oklahoma.

But until joining the self-proclaimed "Great American Bicycle Tour," Scott had never been further west than Lawton, Okla., a thriving community which must have some tremendous notoriety which presently escapes me.

The Pedaling Dozen departed Tavern on the Green at Central Park in New York City at 11:30 a.m., on Wednesday, June 18.

Before them lay 15 states plus the District of Columbia, numerous river crossings, the Allegheny and Rocky Mountain ranges, the Bonneville Salt Flats, 50 mile-per-hour headwinds across Kansas and 120 miles of rain accumulated during stints in Pennsylvania and, where else, Illinois.

They averaged 75 miles-per-day with a low of 30 from Patapsco State Park in Maryland to Washington, D.C. The high mileage, 123 in a single effort, was recorded between Bennington and Hays in Kansas.

That particularly long day, poor Scott Jacobsen came down with diarrhea. Few words could aptly describe the misery of riding from Bennington to Hays.

Seven guys and five gals were The Pedaling Dozen. They were accompanied across America by an escort couple driving a Winnebago nicknamed "Sag Wagon" plus two mechanics.

Altogether, says Scott, it was an easy trip because the weather cooperated. Seldom did rain fall and never west of Illinois.

They crossed the Bonneville Salt Flats, from Knolls to Wendover, Utah, during early morning hours. Even then, the Flats were kinder than usual.

It had been 125 degrees just two days before The Pedaling Dozen came whizzing along. But the summit was just 85 degrees that afternoon, a record coolness.

"It's a strange thing about the desert," observed Scott, "especially in Nevada. You get up in the morning and it's about 35 degrees. In the afternoon, it's about 103."

He acknowledged you receive "lots of strange looks in the desert" and Scott really couldn't understand that phone booth which sat in desert wastelands between Battle Mountain and Austin in Nevada, 45 miles from either spot. There sat a phone booth, marring the scenery, like something the cactus has mistakenly bred in a rare moment of supreme fertility.

Trail Ridge Road between Estes Park and Grand Lake in the Rockies of Colorado provided a special thrill. It's a 12,178-foot summit, the highest paved road in the United States.

"You'd see all these Continental Trailways buses trying to make it up with black smoke coming out all over," said Scott. "And cars pulled over all heated up."

"It's a pretty tough grade for 25 miles. But it didn't really bother us too much because going through Kansas toughened us up."

That's where the group encountered those 50 MPH headwinds plus nothing to look at.

For the record, Scott used three odometers, none of them exceeding 1,180 miles. The Pedaling Dozen put on 40 bicycle safety shows at various J.C. Penney stores. Jeff Lovell of Penn State had the most flat tires, eight.

Irving-Lake idle again; hopes to resume tourney play today

Special to The Herald

SEATTLE, Wash. — Rainstorms prevented any games from being played Monday at the Senior Babe Ruth National Tournament here in Sick Stadium.

Four games were washed off the schedule, bringing to six the number of games postponed since Saturday. The Irving-Lake All-Stars, winners of their first game on Sunday, 7-1 over There's one possible romance in bloom between Ellen Belden of Richardson, Tex., and Rick Hornstra of Torrance, Calif. But Scott says the distance between them makes it "sort of hopeless."

Everybody survived the grueling 4,100 miles. Because she is a good looking girl, 21-year-old Jennifer De-rebery, also from the University of Oklahoma, will tell their adventure on the Aug. 25 Tonight Show.

Most everyone The Pedaling Dozen met was friendly, especially Coloradans who are invaded each summer. Some people laughed at them in Buckeye, Ohio.

But Scott is also quick to warn that amateur long distance riders should stay close to home.

"There are days peddling along when there's almost nothing to look at," he said. "So you get to thinking about what you're doing out there in the middle of nothing."

"Then you get to really know what cycling is all about, that it's not all peaches and cream, at least, long distance touring isn't," Scott explained.

"But that's what makes it a challenge. That's what makes it worth doing."

And Scott Jacobsen does it better than most.

OVER THE RIVER and through the woods, also, through 15 states, over plains, mountain ranges and deserts went Scott Jacobsen of Arlington Heights, on his bicycle. A senior at the University of Oklahoma, Scott just completed a 4,100 mile ride from New York City to San Francisco. It took two months. (Photo by Dave Tongel)

Local linksmen bid for finals

Three area golfers appear headed to the finals of the 45th annual Illinois State Amateur Golf Championship at Bloomington Country Club following fine opening rounds Tuesday.

Craig Ridley of Mount Prospect fashioned a 38-35-73 over the 6,437-yard, par 71 Bloomington course to rank just six strokes off the pace of tournament leader John Phillips of Springfield who carded 34-33-67.

Just two shots behind Ridley is Palatine's Len Fiocca who notched 38-37-75 while Brent Inman of Schaumburg is another stroke behind after a round of 39-37-76.

Arlington Heights' Brad Stake recorded identical 42s for an 84 and Palatine's Cliff Garcia signed a 42-45-67 scorecard. Both will have to catch fire during today's second qualifying round. Only the low 30 scores plus ties will advance to Thursday's 36-hole championship.

Sox top Yanks in 11

Jorge Orta's 11th inning single drove home pinch-runner Nyls Nyman with the winning run Tuesday night, giving the Chicago White Sox a 7-6 victory over the New York Yankees.

New York reliever Sparky Lyle walked Carlos May to start the 11th and Bill Stein sacrificed. Nyman then ran for May and came in on Orta's ground single to right field, which glanced off the glove of second baseman Sandy Alomar. Lyle allowed just one run and two hits in 4 2-3 innings of relief but took the loss, his sixth in nine decisions.

Dave Hamilton, 6-4, was the winner in relief, tossing three shut-out innings.

New York led 6-3 after six innings but in the seventh, Pete Varney and Pat Kelly ripped Yankee starter Larry Gura for one-out singles. Bucky Dent then lined a 2-0 pitch into the left field bullpen for his third home run of the season to knot the score at 6-6.

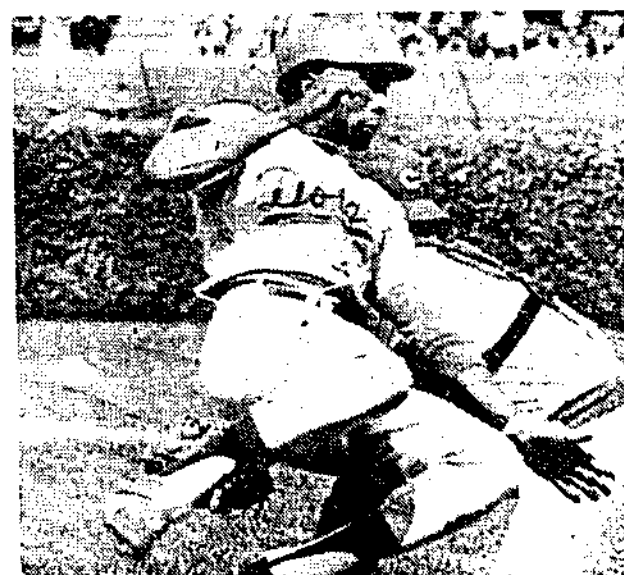

The Yankees had scored two runs off Jesse Jefferson in the first on a walk, singles by Roy White and Thurman Munson and Graig Nettles' ground out. But the White Sox bounced back with one in the second on a walk and Stein's double, then tied it in the third when Varney hit his first major league homer.

Donohue dies of head injuries

Race car driver Mark Donohue died of complications that arose Sunday following an operation to remove a blood clot from his brain. Donohue suffered head injuries in an accident Sunday during a practice run for the Austrian Grand Prix.

The Houston Astros, skidding toward the worst season in their 13 years and already mathematically eliminated from this season's pennant race, Tuesday fired Preston Gomez and named ousted New York Yankee manager Bill Virdon to take immediate control of the team. The Chicago Black Hawks announced the signing of their No. 1 draft choice, center Greg Vaydik of Medicine Hat, Alberta.

The Chicago Bears placed four players on waivers including eighth round draft pick Joe Harris of Georgia Tech, kicker Sergio Albert, offensive lineman Tom Forrest and wide receiver Howard Satterwhite. The Green Bay Packers moved to bolster their offensive line by signing former Chicago Bear tackle Randy Jackson.

Cubs drop duel to Dodgers, 2-1

Lee Lacy's triple to open the eighth inning turned into the winning run for the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday when John Hale hit a sacrifice fly to give reliever Mike Marshall his ninth win of the season in a 2-1 decision over the Chicago Cubs in Wrigley Field.

Don Sutton started for the Dodgers and went six innings on a yield of only one hit before he was lifted for pinch hitter Bill Buckner, whose seventh inning single brought in Steve Yeager with the Dodgers' first run. Marshall worked the final three innings, giving up one hit, walking one and striking out three.

Bill Bonham went eight innings for the Cubs, giving up five hits, and took his 10th loss against 11 wins, although one of the two runs he allowed was unearned. That came when Yeager reached second in the seventh on Bill Madlock's throwing error, advanced on an infield out and scored on Buckner's hit.

Madlock tripled with one out in the fourth for the only hit off Sutton and scored on Jose Cardenal's sacrifice fly. It was the ninth win in the last 11 games for the Dodgers and the third straight defeat for the Cubs.

Left-handed golf tourney Sept. 20-21 in Kankakee

The annual Left-Handed Golf Championship of Illinois will be held on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 20-21, at the Elks Country Club in Kankakee.

Medal play will be conducted over 36 holes with United States Golf Association rules to apply.

Contestants, regardless of ability, are urged to register now through Dick Barnard of Arlington Heights at 394-2316.

A $25 registration fee includes golf both days plus Saturday evening dinner and dancing. There will be an additional $9 charge for wives or guests.

Special room rates have been made available at the Howard Johnson's motel.

The tournament will be categorized into a championship flight plus at least four other flights. Trophies and prizes have been set aside for the top three golfers in each flight.

Electric golf carts can be reserved for $9 and advance notice is required. Barnard can supply all further details.

Palatine hockey signup

Registration for the Palatine Amateur Hockey Assn. begins Saturday, Sept. 6 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Park District Administration Building at 262 E. Palatine Rd. in Palatine. There will also be registration on Sept. 8-12 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and again on Saturday, Sept. 13 from 9 a.m. to noon.

The Park District program will be broken into two groups, the House League and Travelling Teams. The purpose of the House League is a recreational league where priority is placed on fun and instruction rather than on competition. The House League will skate at the Rolling Meadows indoor ice rink.

House League boys will be guaranteed 26 hours of indoor ice time and outdoor ice as weather permits. The House League also provides officials for each game, team jerseys, personalized instruction, "hat trick" and "shutout" patches, discount pass for public skating at Rolling Meadows ice rink and goalie equipment (except stick). It is the philosophy of the Palatine House League that all boys will receive equal ice time.

The Palatine Traveling Teams will compete in the Northern Illinois Hockey League and will play between 24 and 36 games. A total ice time for the Traveling Teams this year is 52 hours beginning in September and running through February.

Home games will be played at the Arlington Ice Spectrum and no schedule is included during Christmas vacation.

House League fees are $30 for Mites (ages 6-7) and $35 for all other age groups as follows: Squirts (9-10), Pee-Wees (11-12), Banlams (13-14) and Midgits (15-16).

Traveling Team fees are $125 for Mites and $145 for Squirts through Midgits. Any questions regarding the Palatine Amateur Hockey Assn. should be directed to the Palatine Park District at 359-0333.

Dog care and health symposium

Program arrangements have been completed for the sixth annual Symposium on Dog Care and Health, co-sponsored by the University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine and the Illinois Dog Clubs and Breeders Assn.

Set for Sunday, Oct. 26, at the Illinois Union on the University of Illinois campus in Urbana, Dr. Erwin Small, professor of veterinary clinical medicine at Illinois, will lead off the program discussing "Care of the Puppy from Weaning to Maturity."

Dr. Thomas Burke, clinician at the UI Small Animal Clinic, will close the morning program with a discussion of "New Concepts in Estrus Control." Birth control in animals is nearing reality and Dr. Burke has conducted research on estrus control at the university.

Noon luncheon speaker is Maxwell Riddle, internationally known dog judge from Ravenna, Ohio. He will discuss recent American Kennel Club policy changes.

First speaker for the afternoon session is George Horn, a noted dog breeder from Newfield, N.J. Horn will discuss "Management of the Stud Dog." Dr. Small will return during the afternoon session to speak on "Canine Virus Disease Control."

Elective sessions will close out the day-long program and registrants can choose from one of three 2-hour electives.

Registration fee for the symposium is $17. Registration forms and further information can be obtained from Dr. Jack L. Tuttle, small animal extension specialist, 281 Small Animal Clinic, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., 61801.

Pet trains owner —

When nutritional deficiencies occasionally are found in a pet, the Gaines Dog Research Center observes, it's usually because the owner has indulged the whims of the pet.

When a pet trains an owner, instead of the reverse, the end result is often improper feeding habits that are difficult to correct.

Harks & Bays —

In the last column we asked who were Auld Pepper, Auld Mustard, Young Pepper, Young Mustard, Little Pepper and Little Mustard? — and, we told you that you would have to do some reading to get the answer.

A number of people came up with some answers, but the only person to have the correct one was Mrs. Lillian Reske, from up Libertyville way.

The answer is the terriers owned by the character named Dandie Dinmont in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "Guy Mannering." From this, the Dandie Dinmont Terrier was named.

Originating somewhere along the Scottish border, these terriers early in the 18th century were famed for their courage in hunting foxes and badgers, and were used extensively to run with packs of Otter Hounds along the river banks.

In Class A Bonnie Fox shot 194 to a 195 for Irene Pinkos. Mildred Anderson's 198 took B honors by seven shots over Jan Marshall.

Satyr's champions

The Satyr's, sponsored by Hoskins Chevrolet of Elk Grove Village, are wearing the crown of the Senior A Division 16-inch softball Tournament of Champions, following a 16-1 thumping of Searle A & R of Des Plaines in Sunday's title game.

The Satyr's, paced by pitchers Bob Moore and Ray Loessl, successfully completed the double-elimination tournament unbeaten against other Arlington Heights Park District league champs.

(This is the second of a 12-part series on bicycles.)

by RICHARD BALLANTINE

With even moderate use a bike will pay for itself. Suppose you use a bike instead of public transportation or a car to get to work and back. Figure public transportation at $1 a day. Say it rains once a week and you live in the Northeast with an 8-month bike season. That's 4 days x 4 weeks x 8 months x $1 or $128 which buys a very nice bike. In sunnier climates with an 11-month 5-day week season ring up $220. On a 20-mile round trip at 12 cents a mile a car is into it for $240 a day, or $300 to $500 a year.

Getting to and from work is just one application. Bikes are just dandy for visiting friends, light shopping, nipping down to the movies and the like. You save money every time.

In heavy traffic you can expect to average 10 mph, and in lighter traffic 15 mph.

One reason a bike is so fast is that it can wiggle through the traffic jams that now typify American cities and towns. Another is the fact that a bike is door-to-door. Cars have to be parked.

On a bike you simply step out the door and take off. No waiting, no parking problems.

All right, you say. So it takes less time than the subway. But I've got to work for a living and the subway is easier, takes less out of me.

Get this. Even a moderate amount of exercise makes life easier. It gives your body tone and bounce which makes daily work and chores a breeze.

According to Eugene Sloan in his "Complete Book of Bicycling" if you get in some sort of regular exercise you can expect:

to live for up to five years longer;

think better (more blood to the brain — and if you think this is crazy go out and run around for a while and then think it through again);

sleep better, and in general be more relaxed;

be stronger and more resistant to injury;

reduce the incidence of degenerative vascular diseases responsible for or associated with heart attacks, strokes and high blood pressure.

Speaking of . . .

Busch Gardens

by KAY MARSH

It was a great vacation-within-a-vacation, even for the Dodo (kid-talk for that Dear Old Dad of Ours). There was everything from a free bollydancing contest at a shopping center near Virginia Beach to free beer at Busch Gardens near Williamsburg.

You may not find the bollydancing if you head for a Bicentennial vacation in Virginia next summer, but I do hope you'll find Busch Gardens.

It's a new theme amusement park just opened this last May, and it's a welcome diversion after hard sightseeing at Colonial Williamsburg and other nearby spots.

The theme is "The Old Country," or "Introducing Europe on This Side of the Atlantic." A day at Busch Gardens doesn't exactly equal a trip to Europe, but you will find cobbled streets, old world shops and a general atmosphere of 18th Century Europe in German, French, Scottish and English areas of the park.

You don't buy a ticket to The Old Country. You buy a Passport. You pay $8.50 for adults, nothing for toddlers 3 and under and $5.50 for other children under 12.

What does your money buy? Just about everything. Your Passport includes your admission to all rides, shows, attractions, displays and exhibits. It does not include the shooting gallery, the arcade or your refreshments and souvenirs.

YOUR PASSPORT doesn't say so, and it's not advertised, but your adult ticket also entitles you to three free beers in Germany. As far as we could tell, nobody was counting, though we did see some younger people asked to show identification to prove they were of age.

Even aside from the free beer, we especially enjoyed the "gemutlichkeit" around the Willkommenhaus in Germany. There was everything from animals for the children to pet to costumed young people dancing a fast polka to the happy music of an ein-zwei compah band.

With all of these attractions, it was difficult to get the P-10 out of Germany, but we finally managed. We even got him on the Log Flume, a spectacular ride that zooms you by a seven-foot buzz saw and leaves you somewhat splashed. Other popular rides include the German steel roller coaster, the antique Carousel and the old-fashioned cars at Le Mans Racetrack.

Yes, there are crowds and lines. There are also pleasant attendants, and shelters with fans so you can wait in cool comfort. This might also be a good place to mention that you can rent a stroller and/or a wheelchair if you should need one.

Even if you don't want to wait in lines, it's fun just to stroll through the various areas of this "Journey through history." The phrase may be a slight exaggeration, but the Gardens are clean and colorful and there's a pleasant ambience.

The food is no better or worse than at other theme parks. The lines, however, are long, and this is one place we wished we'd brought a picnic lunch. There are inviting, shaded tables everywhere and a special picnic area.

ANOTHER HAPPY "plus" is the variety of shows and entertainment. We liked best the fantastic puppets at the Magic Lantern Theatre. But don't miss the sensational magic and special electronic effects at the Old Globe Theatre. There are also music programs, animal acts, a bird circus and other free shows that give you a welcome chance to sit down and rest.

As at all the theme parks, transportation is big at Busch Gardens. Do ride the Skyride, the Steam Train and take a Rhine River Cruise.

Most popular of all, though, is Eagle I, the monorail that takes you over to the Anheuser-Busch Hospitality Center. There you can enjoy a tour of the modern, highly-automated brewery, and also more free beer.

Don't, however, take the Dodo at your house there until late, as you'll probably have a hard time persuading him to head back to The Old Country. And the latter is even more appealing and less crowded after dark.

If you, too, would like to visit The Old Country on your Virginia vacation, you might like to write for a free booklet giving you more details. The address is Busch Gardens, P.O. Box 77, Williamsburg, Va. 23185.

Women to be better informed about risks of pill, IUDs

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

Women will soon have access to more complete information on the risks of certain contraceptives before they use them.

The Food and Drug Administration expects to issue a final order this fall requiring that detailed warning notices concerning intrauterine contraceptives (IUDs) be given to a woman before she has the device inserted.

In addition, the FDA is updating the labels for oral contraceptives to include the latest findings on side effects, such as increased incidence of heart attacks.

Birth control pills were the first prescription drug in the United States required to have a printed patient warning. IUDs will be the third medical product to carry such information.

THE INFORMATION on IUDs, to be made available to women before the device is inserted, will explain the pros and cons, risks and side effects of the contraceptive. The brochure will warn about such complications as excess bleeding, perforation of the uterus and septic abortions.

Required labeling directed at physicians will contain information on insertion and removal technique, treatment of side effects, and clinical research findings, according to the FDA.

The proposed labeling, which is now at the comment stage, was initiated as a result of complications which have arisen among women wearing IUDs. The FDA reports 313 septic abortions among women who became pregnant wearing IUDs. In addition, the devices have been linked to 43 deaths in recent years.

SIXTEEN OF THE deaths and 219 of the pregnancy-related infections involved the Dalkon Shield IUD, which has since been taken off the market. But it is estimated as many as a million women are still wearing this device.

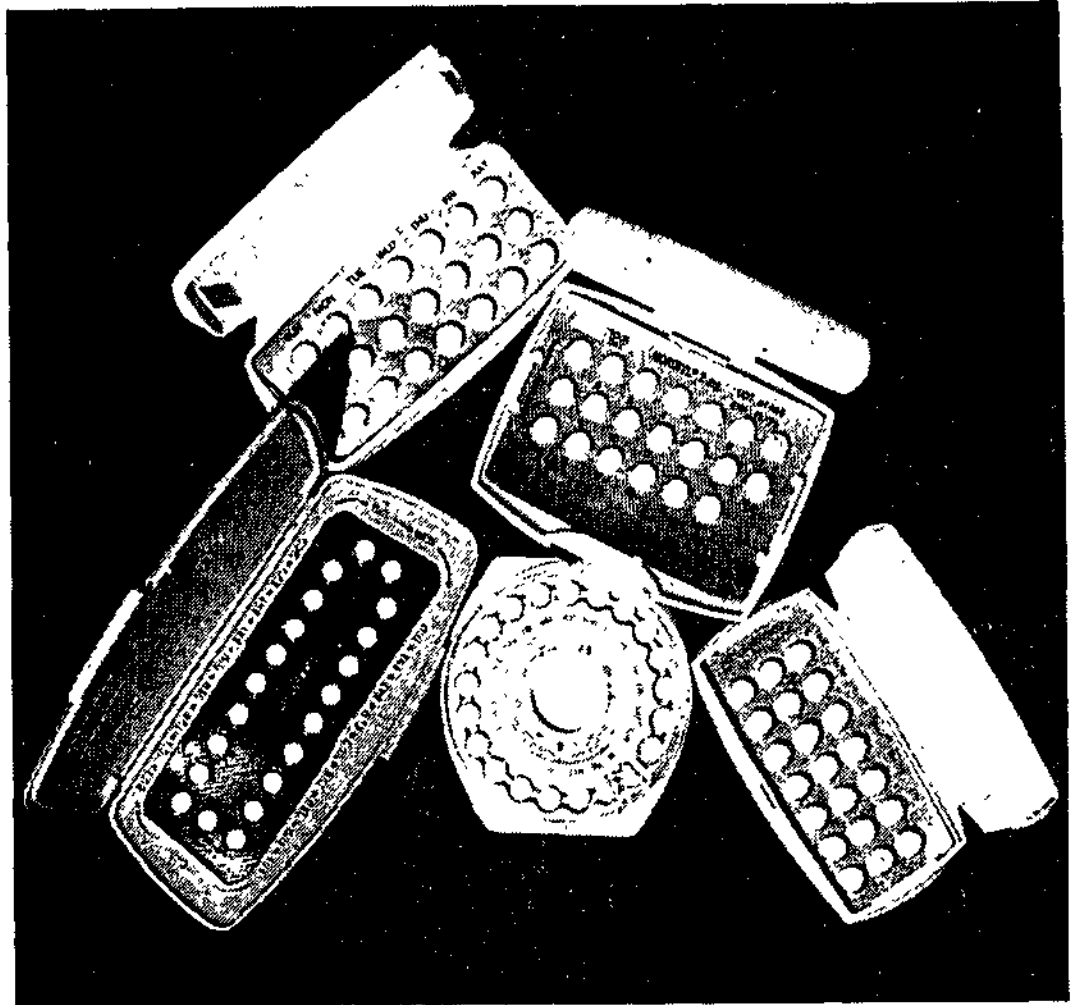

Although the Dalkon Shield has a unique construction which figured in the increased infection and abortion rate, other IUDs have resulted in enough problems to lead to the FDA's blanket warning requirement.

Referring to the label information on IUDs and birth control pills, an FDA spokeswoman said it is "important for women to know this to decide what risks they'll take for what benefits."

She added that "hopefully, with the new labeling information and all the publicity on IUDs, women who wear them will at least know enough to go to their doctors immediately if they think they're pregnant."

WHILE THE IUD is roughly 95 per cent effective, problems arise when a woman becomes pregnant while wearing the device. In addition, latest findings on the Dalkon Shield indicate that even non-pregnant wearers of this device run an increased risk of infection.

Most recently, a study done at the University of Washington in Birth control pills are packaged in handy "calendar" format.

Seattle indicated that IUDs in general are causing a significant incidence of a dangerous and painful pelvic disease. Researchers are ranking this newly-discovered problem as the most common of all adverse reactions to IUDs.

Birth control pills, which have a near-100 per cent effective rate, also are having their share of complications. A number of new products have come on the scene which eliminated some of the original problems — but induced new ones.

TRADITIONAL BIRTH control pills contain estrogen, a hormone that has been blamed for blood-clotting, high blood pressure and most recently, heart attacks. In addition, the pill must be taken regularly or effectiveness is lost.

Depo-Provera is a contraceptive drug that contains no estrogen, only progesterone, and provides three-month protection with a single injection. Manufactured by Upjohn, it is not approved for contraceptive use by the FDA because it has been linked to breast cancer in animals and has been found to cause an unusually high rate of tubal pregnancies.

So-called "mini-pills," which have become more widely available, also do not contain estrogen, but they are somewhat less effective than estrogen pills and may, if they contain only progesterone, cause breakthrough bleeding.

THE MUCH-PUBLICIZED "morning-after pill" contains the hormone DES, which has also been linked to cancer in laboratory animals and has been banned as an animal growth stimulant. As a contraceptive, DES is currently used only in emergencies such as rape, and usually causes nausea and headaches for patients.

The newest contraceptive to receive FDA approval is an IUD that contains progesterone, which it releases over period of a year to prevent pregnancy. Called Progestasert by its manufacturer, the device is expected to become available early next year.

As the first once-year birth control drug, it is a new development. But it will have the disadvantages of both IUDs and pills, although the chemical side effects are expected to be less than with other contraceptive drugs. It is expected to have an effective rate comparable to other IUDs.

Newest contraceptive—drug in an IUD.

What is defense against uninsured driver?

by JULIE MARTOCCIO

Dear Attorney Martocello,

I, too, have seen a light at the end of the tunnel in your column. Recently I was involved in a rear end collision auto accident for the second time where the other driver claimed no insurance. (1) I reported it to the police, but no one was ticketed. I am a single person and although my car is not new, I have liability on it because it is my only means of transportation to my work. (2) The last time it would have cost $900 to have repaired it in a body shop (more than the car is worth). Luckily, my friends did the repairs for me for $200.

(3) The point is, how can we let these uninsured drivers get away with menacing others only to pay the brunt of their irresponsibility? (4) How can I be sure someone is not deliberately denying their insurance to keep from paying and to keep it off their record?

(5) As for myself, I now must invest in a lawyer to sue even to get the money that it will cost me to repair it (the car) again or to buy another if it is not repairable.

(6) TO INSURE it with more coverage for my own protection to more than the blue book value is also irrational. I feel. (7) Where do the courts intervene to seek justice in a case such as this? (8) Is this what "no fault" is all about? Respectfully — J.R.S.

Dear J.R.S.

I've numbered your questions and answers for easier reading and in order to have enough space to cover the information you are seeking. This may help you to find that "light at the end of the tunnel," which, by the way, is a welcome, rewarding remark for a columnist to receive.

(1) I would have to know all the facts to comment on why the officer did not ticket either of you.

(2) No matter what the amount of the damages, you would be unable to collect more than the blue book value.

(3) One way is to have basic liability insurance in the form of collision and comprehensive that would cover physical damage to your car and injuries caused by uninsured motorists.

(4) In some states — unfortunately not Illinois — motorists are compelled to have insurance before they are permitted to drive on the public highways. Illinois has a Financial Responsibility Act which requires an uninsured driver who is involved in an accident to provide proof that he is able to pay for damages he may cause before being permitted to drive. If he fails to pay the victim's claim, his driver's license and auto plates may be revoked. Unfortunately, this law does not take effect until an accident occurs.

(5) The above does not mean that the person is not liable if he has no insurance. Lawsuits may follow which would compel the guilty party to sell his property or burden him with a judgment. It's not very effective, it's true, when the offender has no assets.

(6) Same as answer No. 2.

(7) COURTS INTERVENE only when a suit is filed; otherwise, it's beyond their scope of authority.

(8) I think you are referring to compulsory auto insurance mentioned in (4). Even under no fault, the situation would still be between you and the insurance company.

No fault auto insurance basically is the kind that permits drivers and passengers to be paid by their own insurance companies in case of an accident. There is a limited basic amount for actual medical expenses, lost wages and there are variations of the law in which property damage is sometimes included.

Some states have already adopted a form of no fault. Illinois is currently struggling with no fault legislation, and Congress is considering one for the nation.

Very briefly the pro no fault auto insurance enthusiasts say it would hasten settlement of cases, insurance companies would be inclined to settle large claims as quickly as small ones, and the premiums would be less. Those opposed to no fault insist the premiums would be more, that you are rewarding the guilty at the expense of the innocent, that it undermines the constitutional right of trial by jury and does not allow damages for "pain and suffering."

I hope this information has been helpful to you.

The Jon Walpoles take a windjammer cruise

A windjammer cruise in the Virgin Islands with stops in the islands was the honeymoon for Gail Anne Thompson and Jon Steven Walpole. After the eight-day cruise the newlyweds moved into the 60-year-old home they purchased in Elgin.

Gail, daughter of the Roy Walter Thompsons of Arlington Heights, and Jon, son of Mrs. Ruth Walpole, Elgin, and Edward Walpole, Hoffman Estates, met while both were studying at Northern Illinois University. Before college, Gail was graduated in 1972 from Arlington High and Jon from Wheeling High in 1967.

Mr. and Mrs. Jon S. Walpole

Jon graduated from Judson College in 1973 and is with Aerospace Management Services International, Chicago. Gail is with Chicago Aerial Survey, Des Plaines.

THEIR WEDDING took place at 5:30 p.m. July 26 in Southminster United Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights. For the double ring service Gail chose a gown of organza with beading and lace trim. A beaded headpiece held her veil, and she carried white phalaenopsis and stephanotis.

Her sister, Nancy Fredrickson, Arlington Heights, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Marita Coonce, and the bride's cousin, Constance Helm, both of Naperville, and the groom's niece, Kimberly Walpole, West Dundee. His niece, Amanda Poppi, Elgin, was junior bridesmaid. All wore floral print hooded bolero gowns with a shocking pink back-ground, and carried orchid carnations and baby's breath. Mrs. Fredrickson's cascade also included pink roses.

JENNIFER WENDEL, 6-year-old niece of the groom from Elgin, was flower girl wearing a dark purple organza hoop-skirted gown trimmed in white lace. Her flowers were pink carnations and baby's breath, carried in a basket.

Phil Walpole, West Dundee, was his brother's best man, and ushers were William Rosenthal, Crystal Lake; Reynolds Tague, Elgin; and the bride's brother-in-law, Scott Fredrickson, Arlington Heights.

A reception for 130 guests was held in Itasca Country Club.

Hersey High grads wed

Hersey High graduates Shelly Ann Johnson and James D. Legh-Page chose the third anniversary of their first date, July 26, for their wedding. They chose Jurettown United Methodist Church in Dresher, Pa., for the service because Shelly and her family are former Philadelphia residents.

Shelly's parents, the Robert S. Johnsons, Arlington Heights, lived in Mount Prospect before moving to Philadelphia. Jim is the son of George D. Legh-Page, former Arlington Heights resident now residing in Willingboro, N.J.

Attending Shelly as matron of honor for the 2 p.m. service was her sister, Mimi Snyman, Davenport, Iowa, and bridesmaids were the groom's sisters, Debbie and Cheryl, Willingboro, and Cindy Bond and Lisa Sauter, Maple Glen, Pa. They wore identical gowns and carried flowers, each in a different rainbow color.

JIM CHOSE HIS father as best man, and his brothers George Jr. and John, Houston, Tex., and Robert of Willingboro, and his brother-in-law, Robert Langley, who with his wife, Kathryn, came from Dallas, Tex., as ushers.

A reception for 100 guests was held in the church and a dinner reception was hosted by Shelly's aunt and uncle, the W. H. Hursts of Ambler, Pa.

The newlyweds flew to Orlando, Fla., and Disney World for their honeymoon and are now residing in Mundelein. Jim is stationed at Great Lakes Naval Training Station. Jim is a '73 graduate of Hersey; his bride, a '75 graduate.

Pupils guests at wedding

No one had to call the class to attention July 25 when "Miss Hagen," fifth grade teacher, and "Mr. Dawson," learning disabilities teacher, were wed. Students from Elm School in Elmwood Park were guests as Randi Elaine Hagen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Hagen of Mount Prospect, became Mrs. John Collier Dawson in St. Mark Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect.

John is the son of Mrs. Josephine Dawson of Oak Park and the late Melvin Dawson.

The bride's gown of white organza over sate peau was appliqued with re-embroidered Chantilly lace accented in pearls and crystals. Her cathedral veil fell from a tiara of lace petals. She carried white orchids, roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

CLAUDIA SOPER of Bloomington, serving as maid of honor, wore a halter floral print gown in shades of peach, coral and yellow with matching capelet. Her flowers were yellow mums, peach daisies and baby's breath.

Matching Claudia's gown were those of the bridesmaids, Nancy Gorman, Mount Prospect, a cousin; Sandy Christman, Des Plaines; Debbie Miller, Arlington Heights; and junior bridesmaid Lorie Sims, Elmwood Park. They carried cascade bouquets and wore peach mums with peach streamers as headpieces.

Joy Maller, the bride's 8-year-old cousin of Lockport, Ill., was flower girl in attire similar to the other attendants.

KEITH CHRISTMAN of Des Plaines was best man, while Mike Fiene, North Lake; Dave Gilchrist, Oak Park; and Jerry Roche, Chicago, served as ushers.

Following a dinner reception for 220 at North West Builders Hall, Chicago, the newlyweds left for a 24-week Caribbean cruise, with a stop at Disney World, Fla. They are now at home in Oak Park.

Randi is a graduate of Forest View High School and Illinois State University. Her husband earned his degree at Northeastern Illinois University.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee J. Hoskins

Sharon Gothann chooses green and pink scheme

A color scheme of mint green and pink was used for the July 28 wedding of Sharon Gothann and Lee J. Hoskins. The 1 p.m. double ring service was held in Our Lady of the Wayside Church, Arlington Heights.

Sharon is the daughter of the Alfred Gothanns, Arlington Heights, and Lee is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hoskins, Roselle. Both are employed by Hoskins Chevrolet in Elk Grove Village.

Sharon is a graduate of the Business Machines Institute in Chicago and Lee is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame. A reservist, he also served in the Navy with submarine duty in the Pacific.

A SILK ORGANZA gown with Venise lace was Sharon's choice in wedding gown. A Juliet cap held her flgertip veil, and she carried white roses, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Simone Grams, White Pigeon, Mich., was matron of honor, and Karen Perrone, Itasca; Nancy Leonetti, Downers Grove; and Kris Schulze, Fairfield, Ohio, were bridesmaids. Their mint jersey gowns had matching capes, and they carried nosegays of pink roses with baby's breath and stephanotis.

Best man was Ken Schulze, Fairfield, and ushers were the couple's brothers, Rich Hoskins, Schaumburg; Jay Hoskins, Roselle; and Clyde Gothann, Arlington Heights.

After greeting 200 guests at a reception in the Starlight Inn, the newlyweds left on a two-week Hawaiian honeymoon. They are now making their home in Arlington Heights.

Even nonvegetable eaters go for this combination

Dear Dorothy: All the talk about trying to coax or trick some people into eating vegetables drives me to add a bit. I make a fresh vegetable dish that entices even those who pass up salads. All you have to do is wash a head of cauliflower, separate it into flowerets and then add small cans of lima, string beans and peas, all drained, of course. This is all marinated in French dressing, either overnight or for a few hours. Drain again and add one-half cup of tart salad dressing, two tablespoons of cream, a chopped hard-boiled egg, sweet relish, sliced ripe olives and a little minced onion. One sampling and even the confirmed vegetable naysayers start reaching repeatedly.—Peggy Hellman

Dear Dorothy: Is there any way to pack roses so they will last four to five hours while traveling? We're going to visit my mother, she loves fresh roses and we've got beautifuls.—Renee Grissom

I carried such a bunch for eight hours without refrigeration and they arrived in perfect shape. Pick roses that have not quite opened. Soak large pieces of absorbent cotton in water and wrap these around the lower part of the stems and then cover all this with an extra layer of wet paper tow-eling. Lastly, cover the bouquet with a large plastic bag.

Dear Dorothy: Is there anyone who hasn't said dirty words about groceries after staring at those ugly price marks left on laminated plastic counter tops? After a dozen efforts, I've finally come up with the answer. Pour a little dishwashing liquid on the stain and then plop a dripping wet paper towel over that, press down and let dry. The end is that when you pick up the towel, you'll find the price mark on the paper towel and the counter top spotless.—Mrs. Bryce Mortinson.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

A smile balloon for the newlyweds

A smile balloon was an unexpected wedding gift for Annette Kubajak following her marriage July 27 to Frank Del Giudice II. A sidewalk mardi gras was going on outside St. Vincent DePaul Church in Chicago, scene of the 3:30 p.m. double ring service, and a clown presented her with the balloon as the couple left the church.

Annette, daughter of the senior Edward R. Kubajaks of Mount Prospect, was with the Lyric Opera ballet troupe at the Civic Opera House, and her bridegroom, son of the Frank Del Giudices, Rolling Meadows, is a drama student at Illinois State University.

Annette was graduated from Sacred Heart of Mary High School and also studied in the DePaul University Music Department. Her bridegroom was graduated from St. Viator High.

HER MOTHER'S 30-year-old satin wedding gown with antique lace trim and hooped skirt also served as Annette's wedding gown. Her 15-foot veil was attached to a satin crown with leather leaves, and she carried gardenias and stephanotis with a white orchid.

Phyllis Swierz, Arlington Heights, was maid of honor, and Rebecca Blair, Dallas, Tex.; Jill Johnson, Palatine, and a cousin, Irene Kubajak, Orland Park, Ill., were bridesmaids. Phyllis' gown of old rose summer satin was a copy of the bustle gown worn by Annette's grandmother at Mrs. Kubajak's wedding, and the bridesmaids' gowns were also copies, but in emerald green. The maids carried rubrum lilies and white carnations with deep pink centers.

Mark Sattel, Palatine, was the groom's best man, and ushers were Lorry Charak, Highland Park; Leonard Clafano, Chicago; and George Muligano, Ingleside.

A dinner reception for 200 guests was held in the Starlight Inn after which Annette and Frank spent a 10-day honeymoon at Chestnut Mountain Lodge, Galena. They are making their home in Bloomington.

The Paul Dueballs celebrate their 50th

Not all the homes in the Wheeling area had electricity back in the early 1920s, and when the power was brought into the rural area it kept Paul Dueball, a young electrician, busy. He met his wife, Edna, when he wired her parents' Wheeling home, and last Friday Paul and Edna marked their golden wedding anniversary.

Paul was born in Arlington Heights, son of August and Mathilda Dueball, and attended St. Peter's Lutheran School. The Arlington Heights theater now stands where the Dueball home was located. Edna was born in Chicago, daughter of Fred and Bertha Wolf and attended Whitney School in the city.

Her parents moved to Wheeling when she was a teenager, and the couple's garden wedding was held Aug. 15, 1925, in the garden of her parents' farm home. The Wolf home was just north off Dundee Road, now the site of a trucking business.

PAUL AND EDNA purchased property from her parents and have lived at 332 W. Dundee Rd. all of their married life. Years ago, Paul went into Civil Service and spent 22½ years employed at the U. S. Naval Air Station in Glenview, retiring in 1968.

The Dueballs celebrated their anniversary with 100 friends and relatives Aug. 3 at an afternoon party at Allgauer's Fireside Restaurant in Northbrook planned by their only child, a son, Earl; their daughter-in-law, Frankie; and their grandchildren, Steve and Kathy, all of Des Plaines.

The party included a remarriage service performed by Rev. Nelson of Wheeling Presbyterian Church, a toast, dinner, singing and dancing. And Edna danced in the golden slippers worn by her mother at her golden anniversary 26 years ago.

THE CLUB ALSO sponsored a Little League baseball team, purchased a podium for Raupp Memorial, purchased educational materials for partially sighted students in Dist. 21 and donated paintings to the Channel 11 auction. One hundred dollars was given to the Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Regional Research Center and $100 to the Stevenson High School Band for a trip to Boston for the Bicentennial celebration.

Ventriss-Sauer match wits in 'Sunshine Boys'

by GENIE CAMPBELL
(A review)

Tom Ventriss has found his match, Country Club Comedy Theatre has found itself a blockbuster of a show and community theater is getting its due, too.

Nell Simon can usually be counted on for a few good laughs, but "Sunshine Boys," now at Country Club Comedy Theatre, goes well past the clever, chuckling stage.

The play is fresh and different, particularly if you are used to Simon's past hits, "Come Blow Your Horn," "Star Spangled Girl" and "Barefoot in the Park," fluff, flirty shows that after awhile all begin to sound and look the same.

This one, however, is a rollicking, derisive comedy about two loquacious old codgers, ex-vaudeville partners who haven't spoken in 11 years.

LIKEABLE THOUGH stubborn, the two are reunited to do a television special. Only nothing has changed. They bicker, make unfattering accusations to one another and generally drive everyone around them nuts. The lines are witty and well-timed, making for a fast-paced, fun show.

Ventriss, who is taking a temporary hiatus as director to star in this show, plays Willie Clark, actually the more eccentric of the two. And Ventriss is magnificent.

The other star of the show is Ed Sauer, who until this production played strictly community theater roles. But he has the necessary experience for professional theater and it definitely shows up in his performance.

THOUGH SAUER plays a less flamboyant guy, he is equally as obstinate and the perfect target for Willie's name calling.

Ventriss and Sauer go way back, having worked on many shows together, but until now never faced one another on stage. Too bad we had to wait so long.

Ventriss picked "Sunshine Boys" because it is a relatively new play and hasn't been staged that much in the area. And he was right in his choice.

Even if you did catch Sam Levene and Ned Glass when they did this particular show in Chicago a year ago last spring, it's worth your while to catch Country Club's rendition.

Ventriss and Sauer milk every bit as much out of their respective roles as those two veteran actors and it's much easier to hear them. I hadn't realized how much of the humor I missed because of poor acoustics at the Blackstone.

THE GROUND work is well laid for the second act when the two arrive at the CBS studio to rehearse one of their old vaudeville routines. The scene is extremely well directed, credit going to Michael Jon Sims, who as Ventriss' assistant, directed this comedy.

Also good is Pete Fontana in the role of Willie's nephew who acts as referee between the two ex-partners.

And it's pleasing to see another community theater regular, Karen Mason, in a minor though very appropriate role for her. Miss Mason plays a chocolate-eating registered nurse who gives Willie some of his own medicine.

Also in the show are Anne Mahler, Larry Peterson and Bob Andrews. "Sunshine Boys" runs through Sept. 14.

Ask Andy

Sting hurts bee more than victim

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Todd Reese, 10, of Duluth, Ga., for his question: CAN A BEE GLOW A NEW STINGER?

A bee sting is a painful wound, and the agony may last for several days. It may comfort you somewhat to know that this particular bee will never sting you or anyone else again. On the other hand, when you know the whole story and understand the bee's point of view, you end up feeling sorry for the busy little insect.

The honeybee is just about the busiest little creature in the whole world. What's more, she seems to enjoy her chores, for during the flowery summer season she usually dies from exhaustion after six weeks. Her various duties include the care and feeding of hosts of baby bees, cleaning and tending the hive and the queen mother, gathering pollen and nectar to make foods and wax to build combs for cradles and storing honey.

Obviously the average worker bee has her mind on her work, and any distraction tends to make her feel frantic. This is her point of view when some innocent human being seems to be in her way. Naturally she reacts to protect herself and her urgent duties to the hive. And for this, Mother Nature provided a stinger in the tail end of her striped, furry abdomen. The base of her sharp stinger is connected to a gland that creates a painful poison.

A busy bee has no way of knowing that you mean her no harm. When you get in her way, she feels angry or scared or at least threatened. So, with all her might, she jabs her stinger into your flesh — and the pain is sure to remove you from the scene in a hurry. However, her tough stinger is attached to her soft abdomen by delicate muscles. She can stab it in but usually fails to pull it out.

Almost always the bee's entire stinger is ripped out of her body as she tries to pull it free. Sometimes all or part of it is left in the wound. This, of course, should be removed, quickly and carefully and preferably by an expert. Meantime, the poor little bee flies away to die of a mortal wound.

The average worker bee cannot grow a new stinger. She can sting only once, and her one act of aggression costs her life. A queen bee can sting several times, though she stings only other queens — never her busy workers. Hornets and other cousins of the bee clan have sturdier weapons. They can sting several times — and live to brag about it.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Kathy Brown, 13, of Peoria, Ill., for her question: WHERE ARE THE CLOUDS ON A CLEAR DAY?

Clouds are made of misty moisture, just like the foggy stuff that clings to the ground on a misty morning. This cloud material is mini-droplets of liquid water, small enough to hang suspended in the air. A slight change in temperature can change this liquid water into water vapor, which is an invisible gas like the other assorted gases of the air.

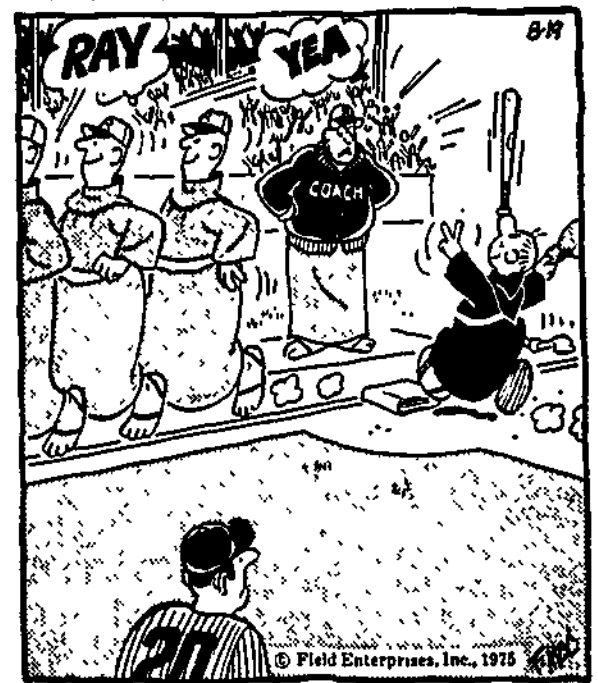

The change from liquid water to gaseous water is governed by strict weather regulations. It so happens that the air can contain so much water vapor — and no more. And the amount depends upon its temperature. When the air chills, some of its gaseous vapor becomes misty droplets of cloudy moisture. For example, warm moist air rises and chills, forming clouds aloft. In warm, sunny weather the thirsty air evaporates cloud moisture — which becomes invisible vapor and disappears. The same thing occurs when the warm sun burns off the morning mist.

East's play gets second high-handed

South looked over dummy and thought, "Too bad North didn't respond one trump. I would have put him in three which he would have wrapped up."

Then South got down to the really important problem. How was he going to make four spades.

He started by playing dummy's king of diamonds. Maybe West had under the ace. West hadn't and the defense played a second and third diamond. South ruffed the third diamond and played two top trumps. At that point he could play his ace of hearts, cash the clubs and lead a second heart. If either opponent had started with king-small or queen-small, he would have been end played.

That didn't appeal. The hand looked like one with all suits breaking quite evenly, so South tried another line.

He cashed the clubs, stopping in dummy. Then he led a low heart. His plan was to finesse his nine and it would have worked except for one thing. East had been thinking while the play went on. When that heart was led, East hopped up with his king.

"When garbage can run generators and light up your living room, it's not garbage anymore."

"In fact, when we use garbage in one of our generators, we won't even call it garbage," Gene Bailey, engineer in charge of Commonwealth Edison's trash-burning project, turned from his desk for a moment, then swiveled back with a plastic bag full of strange-looking confetti.

"This is 'prepared refuse.' It's what's left of what you throw in your garbage can, after the city shreds it and extracts any metal that can be recycled."

In the trash-burning experiment worked out between Commonwealth Edison and the City of Chicago, garbage will be collected as usual.

Every day, a thousand tons of it will be shredded and filtered in the new $14 million plant being constructed by the City of Chicago. It is there that just plain garbage becomes "prepared refuse." Then, early every morning, 700 tons of last night's leftovers will be sent through an air tunnel at a mile a minute to Commonwealth Edison's Crawford Station, where it will be burned in a mixture of 90% coal, 10% trash.

This system is slated to start operation in the fall of 1975.

Mr. Bailey estimates that during each year of operation this project will save 100,000 tons of coal—enough to provide electricity for 45,000 homes. "And instead of ending up as hundreds of acres of landfill, the trash can be put to work as a fuel that meets and beats the standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency."

He put the plastic bag back in its place atop a stack of progress reports. "Some of my colleagues wonder how I can get so excited about burning trash. Well, it's simple. This program will make use of a plentiful resource, save our countryside, and cut down on pollution. I happen to think it's one of the finest things I've ever been involved in."

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABROT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (608-5230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Swan Lake project

3rd developer to sue village

A third developer who was denied permission to build in Wheeling has filed a lawsuit against the village seeking court approval to overturn the village's action.

The suit was filed last week on behalf of the owners and developer of the proposed Swan Lake apartment development, a 40-acre site on the east side of Wheeling Road south of Palatine Road.

Edgar Lundberg, of the law firm of Shaheen, Lundberg, Callahan and Burke, Chicago, representing the plaintiffs, said the suit does not seek monetary damages but asks the court to declare the rights of the owner and developer valid and require the village to issue building permits.

The Village board in January rejected plans for the project because it felt density on the site was too high. Plans for the project call for 540 units to be built on only 16.5 acres of the site with the remainder of the land to be used for purchase of a school site by Prospect Heights Dist. 23 and development of a detention pond.

THE PLAN commission recommended rejection of the plans based on the high density, which surpassed the village's former 16-unit per acre limit. Last month the board voted to reduce the village development limit to 14 units per acre.

The project was first proposed in July 1973, when the plan commission refused to consider it because zoning on the property had expired. The village board voted to extend the zoning on the property and when the matter was referred back to the commission last September, it failed to come up with a recommendation.

The village board directed the commission to make a recommendation on the project early in January and a 5-to-2 vote against the project was forwarded to the board.

Ralph Stoetzel, developer of the project, owns 20 of the 40 acres and has an option to buy the remaining 20 acres if the project wins approval.

Lundberg said the village is required to file an answer to the suit as the next step in the case before any court date is set. The village board Monday night referred the matter to Village Atty. John Burke.

THE SUIT is the third to be filed against the village by a developer. A suit filed by Victor Smigel seeking permission to build six-unit apartments on 47 lots along W. Strong Street was settled out-of-court recently. The compromise calls for construction of 38 six-flats, four 4-unit townhouses and two single-family homes.

A second suit, filed by developer George Manda, seeks $3 million in damages against the village and its officials for blocking construction of the 264-unit Pine Hill apartment project.

The board voted to reject the project based on a recommendation from the plan commission because Manda changed the project from a condominium development to an apartment project without first notifying the village.

New Era zone change request rejected

A request for rezoning 8.5 acres at the northwest corner of Palatine and Wheeling roads from single-family to multi-family has been rejected by the Wheeling Village Board.

In a 4-to-2 vote, the board defeated a request by New Era Construction Co. to rezone the property from R-1 to PD-4. The company planned to build three- and four-bedroom townhouses on the property, adjacent to New Era's Sandpiper Walk Condominiums.

Trustees Gilbert Monoson and William Hein voted in favor of the rezoning.

Before the vote, the board heard from Jack Gilligan, former president of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn., who spoke against the rezoning. Gilligan, who also spoke against the project during zoning board hearings on the matter, said the developer ignored issues such as school and traffic impact on the area.

GILLIGAN CHARGED the project would lie in two watersheds, that traffic in the area would be greatly increased and the impact on Prospect Heights Dist. 23 would be more than the school district could handle.

Gilligan also said the rezoning request was not proper, because the developer should have requested a PD-3 classification, which applied to townhouses. PD-4 deals with apartments and limits construction to 14 units per acre. PD-3 covers townhouses and limits development to eight units per acre.

Bernard Brown, company president, said the PD-4 classification was sought because the proposed density of the project is 9.5 units per acre.

Several residents of the area argued, during zoning board hearings on the matter, development of the property would compound flooding problems. Residents said because the area proposed for development is higher than the adjacent condominium property, the danger of flooding would be increased.

MONOSON SAID impact of the development on the area was not at issue before the board and such matters should be the concern of the plan commission. Gilligan countered this was a poor attitude for the village to assume.

Trustee Otis Hedlund agreed with Gilligan and said to grant the rezoning would be contrary to the newly enacted PD-3 and PD-4 ordinance, which separates townhouses from other multi-family developments.

Green quits environment panel, cites trustee bias

James Green has resigned from the Wheeling Environmental Advisory Commission, charging the village board with lack of frankness and candor in dealing with village issues.

In a letter to the board, Green, vice chairman of the commission, chided the board for "inconsistent" actions during the last several months since four new trustees assumed office. He listed the board's firing of Paul Hamer as village attorney, the approval of building plans for Allstate Insurance Company's auto salvage facility over the commission's recommendation to reject the project and the delay in deciding the fate of an auto crushing plant as factors in his decision.

Green said he was "appalled" at the actions of the board and said he believed it has not been dealing fairly with its commissions and residents of the village. "The board has not been frank and candid with me, as I feel I have been with them," Green said.

"We run into the same old problem of zoning before planning," Hedlund said. "I think we would be very remiss to grant a PD-4 on a piece of property that should be PD-3. To allow a density like this to go in over our new ordinance would be a mistake," he said.

He also cited an increasing demand on his time as a factor in his decision and added serving on the commission no longer provided him any personal satisfaction.

Green is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Trustees John Cole and William Hein voted not to accept Green's resignation and Commission Chairman William Rogers said he regretted Green's decision because he was an active and influential member of the commission.

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in.

"I met almost every day and sometimes oftener with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

Gentlemen 'chicken farmers' made Prospect Hts.

by TOM VON MALDER
Prospect Heights originally was sold as an area of chicken farms for "gentlemen farmers."

Joyce Armington, the Prospect Heights librarian, is heading an effort to create an audio-visual history of the Prospect Heights area.

The chicken farm idea developed during the mid-1930s, the era just after the Great Depression. She said the land was sold mostly in acre lots under apparently one of the first Federal Housing Administration mortgage programs.

Mrs. Armington said these facts were gathered from 14 interviews with residents who have lived in Prospect Heights since before 1940.

She said much of the information has been verified through the help of the Chicago Public Library. There is a chance the group preparing the audio-visual history may be able to speak to Carlton Smith, one of the original developers of the area, who reportedly lives in Florida, she said.

ONE RESIDENT told the interviewers some of the first tri-level homes in the nation were built in Prospect Heights.

Mrs. Armington said the original maps of the area show several streets, which are dead ends today, as through streets. "The people stopped this," she said, as "part of the consistent attitude of the residents to keep this area rural."

Newer residents of the area will be interviewed next for the audio-visual history project. Mrs. Armington said residents in southeast Prospect Heights will be asked about the growth of their area.

A tape and slide presentation will be assembled from all the information, and a narrative script will be written. A booklet also may be published.

Homeowners plan Bicentennial events

The Prospect Heights Improvement Association's Bicentennial committee is planning a three-day celebration of the nation's birthday for next summer.

The committee, headed by Lynn Klotz, has tentatively picked the June 11 to 13, 1976 weekend for the festivities and has begun meeting with representatives from various community organizations to coordinate the community's celebration plans.

"We hope to have a full weekend of activities," Ms. Klotz said Tuesday. She said the June weekend was selected as the likely one because of the expected difficulty in obtaining bands for any activities around July 4. "We were also told to stay away from other holidays, such as Memorial Day," she said.

THE GROUP'S TENTATIVE plans so far call for a three-day carnival, parade and political forum. Ms. Klotz said each night of the carnival will have a different era theme — 1776, 1876 and 1976.

Participants in the carnival will wear clothing of each era each night, there will be different games of each era to play and there may even be food cooked in the style of each era.

Ms. Klotz said the group also hopes to encourage town decorations in the Bicentennial theme. "So far we haven't had many volunteers," she said. "Any we can get will be a real help."

Fire guts treehouse; arson suspected

Wheeling firefighters extinguished a fire that destroyed a small treehouse Tuesday night at the rear of the 1000 block of Valleystream Drive.

Firemen had to stretch fire hoses across a creek to douse the flames about 9:30 p.m. Fire officials said they suspect someone set fire to the structure made from lumber scraps.

Buffalo Grove woman lists woes

Board hears of racial harassment

by BETTY LEE
A woman approached Buffalo Grove officials Monday night with typewritten pages in her hand. She was there to sound out a grievance, one not often heard in the village.

Mrs. Atenogenesa Espinosa and her family are Filipino and have been residents of Buffalo Grove for nearly two years. But for most of the time, she said they have been subjected to a chain of racial nightmares.

Her typewritten pages list those events, beginning with an incident which happened during August of last year. Early one morning, she discovered spilled garbage under her parked car on the driveway.

THE THIEVES took an attaché case, diamond ring, camera, costume jewelry of sentimental value — $600 in cash value.

Ruling on Prospect vote to form city due Sept. 19

The decision on whether Prospect Heights residents will be able to vote to form a city is set for a Sept. 19 ruling in Circuit Court.

1973 with the backing of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn.

The current attempt at incorporation began in early 1974, with court testimony ending nearly a year ago. Several continuances have been granted since then.

The Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. estimates there would be more than 10,000 residents in the new city if Prospect Heights incorporates.

Another month's delay in the case was granted Tuesday because Arlington Heights Village Atty. Jack Siegel again missed a deadline for filing his village's written objections to the incorporation attempt.

Donald Kreger, attorney for the incorporation-sponsoring Prospect Heights Improvement Assn., Tuesday said Siegel has said he will meet the new deadline. Siegel was not in court Tuesday.

One of Siegel's arguments is expected to be that the state law, under which Prospect Heights residents hope to form their city, is unconstitutional. That law was passed in Trustee Thomas Mahoney commended Mrs. Espinosa for her courage to come to the village meeting. "It's a reminder that there are ugly attitudes," he said.

Village board wrapup

Ownership transfer of cemetery planned

Village Atty. John Burke has been directed to prepare an ordinance calling for the transfer of ownership of the Wheeling Cemetery to the village.

The cemetery, on Dundee Road east of Wolf Road, is owned by the Wheeling Cemetery Assn. Members of the association's board of directors have met with the village's real estate and zoning committee to work out details of the land transfer.

Trustee Gilbert Monoson, committee chairman, said the association wants the village to assume ownership of the cemetery because association directors are elderly and no longer capable of managing the cemetery.

The century-old parcel is self-sufficient and almost all the plots are taken, Monoson said, and association directors want to insure the cemetery's maintenance in the future. The land will be transferred to the village for a $1 fee.

Sewers to be inspected

The board awarded a contract to Sewer System Evaluation Inc. to conduct tests as part of the village's sanitary sewer inspection to discover any illegal sewer connections. The tests will cost more than $3,000.

Village Engineer Larry Oppenheimer said the inspection will include smoke bomb testing to determine illegal sump pump connections. The tests will be conducted from the street water main and will not require entering houses, Oppenheimer said.

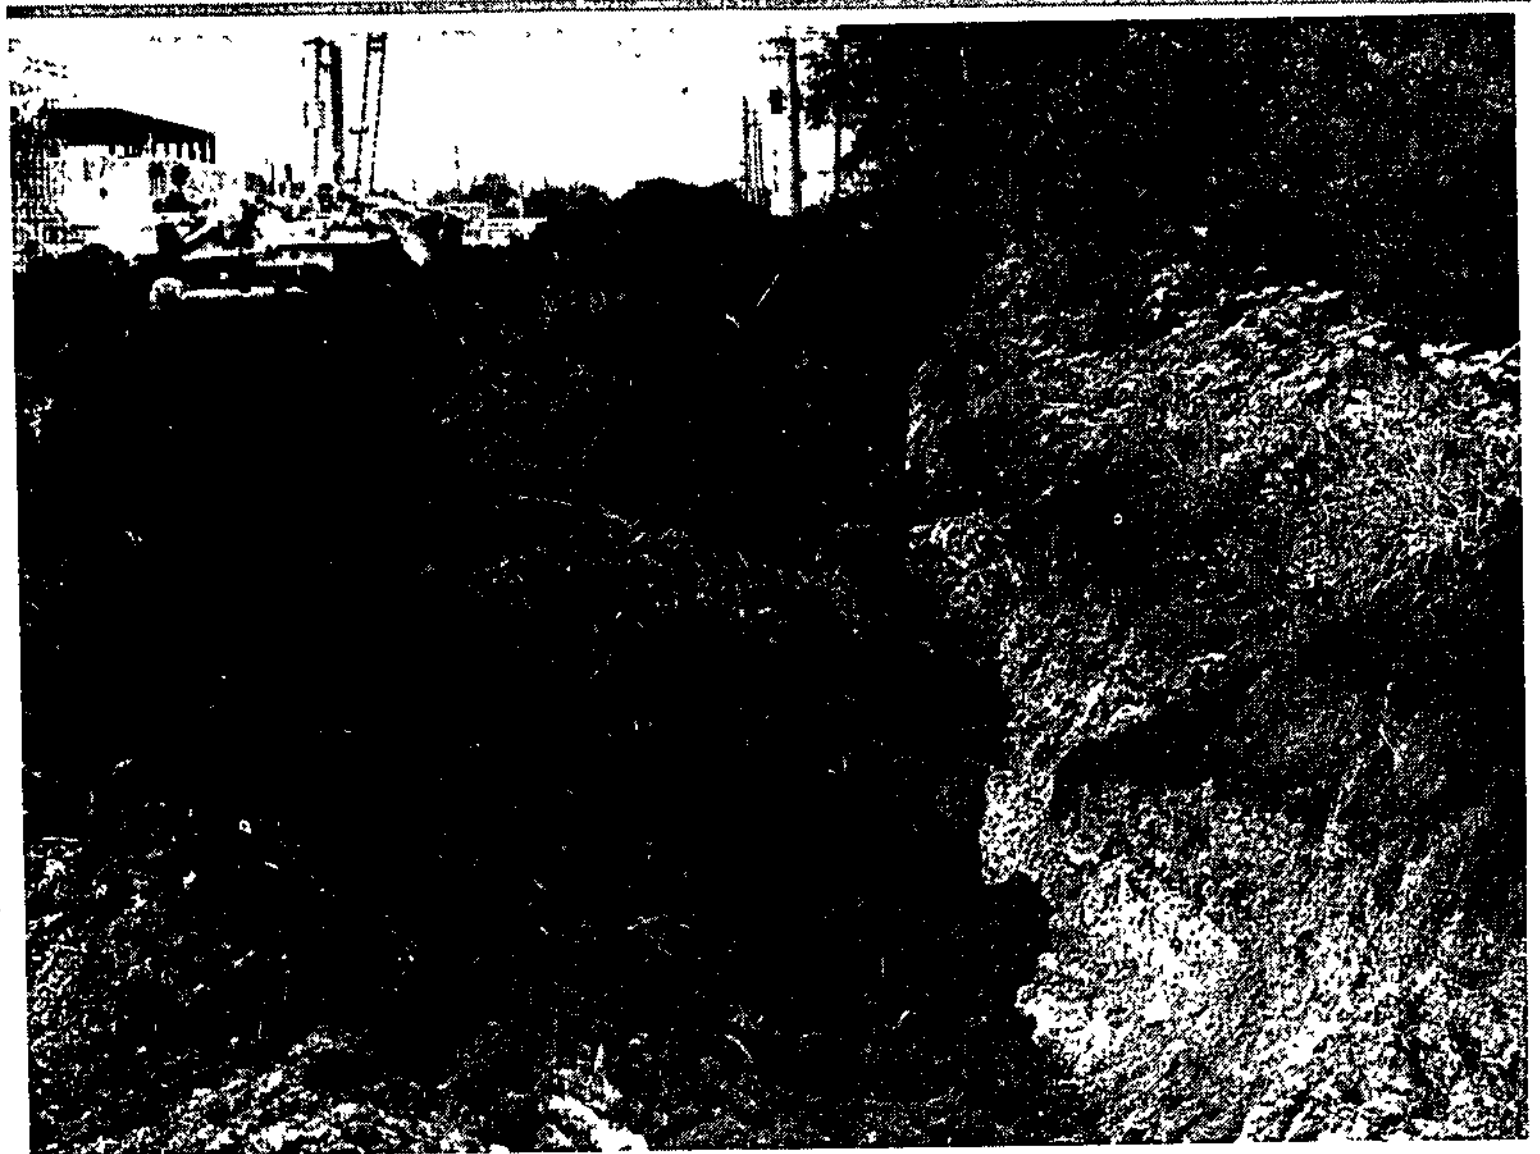

The tests are part of the village's testing program required by the Metropolitan Sanitary District to improve the sanitary sewer system.

More streetlights considered

The board directed Village Mgr. George Passolt to conduct a survey of dark areas in the village to determine where streetlights should be installed. The recommendation for the survey was made by the plan commission.

Passolt also was instructed to contact Albert Zale, developer of Lakeside Villas, to speed up construction of sidewalks along Lakeview Drive in the subdivision. The plan commission recommended the board issue a $20,000 bond for the work if construction of the sidewalks is delayed further.

The board also sent the police department a plan commission recommendation that subdivisions be better patrolled to regulate excessive speeding of cars and motorcycles.

BLACK DIRT FILLS a pit that existed for three weeks behind several houses on Manchester Drive, north of Glenn Avenue.

Wheeling Village officials ordered builder K. M. Night Co. to fill the hole before someone fell in. The trees on the right show how close the pit was to the rear yards of the Manchester Drive houses.

'Hazardous condition,' official says

Builder forced to fill 10-foot hole

Wheeling officials have forced a builder to fill in a 10-foot-deep pit dug behind several houses on Manchester Drive north of Glenn Avenue.

Robert Kaminsky, of the building department, said the hole was dug about three weeks ago by K. M. Night Co., a construction firm which is erecting an industrial building in the area of Glenn and Carpenter avenues.

Kaminsky said the hole was dug so the firm could obtain clay fill for the new building's base. Black dirt was to have been put into the hole, however.

"Nothing prohibits them from digging on their property, but it led to a hazardous condition which we couldn't allow," Kaminsky said.

KAMINSKY BECAME aware of the situation last week when residents on Manchester Drive complained about the situation to Walter Stryczyk of the Environmental Advisory Commission.

Stryczyk notified Kaminsky.

Stryczyk said the residents whose property abutted the 200-to 300-foot long pit feared some child might fall in or even that their rear yard fences and bushes might topple because of the proximity to their rear property lines.

Kaminsky said the hole was supposed to have been filled by Aug. 8 and when he discovered several days later that it had not been filled, he threatened to stop the construction if it were not filled in this week.

"There wasn't any provision on their blueprints to remove any of that dirt," Kaminsky said, explaining why the building department was unaware of the hole initially.

He said the builder did block off some holes in the residential fencing to prevent someone from falling in, but not all approaches to the hole were blocked.

Parks football signup Saturday

Registration for the Wheeling Park District football program will be from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday at Heritage Park, 222 S. Wolf Rd.

Divisions are flag; for players in third and fourth grades; junior tackle; for fifth and sixth grades; and senior tackle; for seventh and eighth grades.

Team managers, coaches and other interested personnel are needed for the program and should contact the park district at 537-2222 for information.

The park district also will sponsor a father-son night Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Heritage Park gym to introduce the program. Movies and refreshments will be served.

The park district will sponsor a pass, punt and kick contest Sept. 8 with the proceeds to finance the football program. Members of the Chicago Winds football team will serve as judges and award prizes.

The contest begins at 6 p.m. at Heritage Park and a $1 fee will be charged.

State sues circus to get more funds for Lions Club

by LINDA PUNCH

A temporary restraining order has been issued to protect money raised by the Schaumburg Lions Club at a circus Monday after the Illinois Attorney General's office filed suit against the circus owners.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott charged the owners of the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., an Oklahoma-based company, with forcing the Schaumburg Lions Club into an illegal contract. Scott said the contract is a "clear violation" of Illinois charitable trust laws which require charities to receive at least 75 per cent of gross receipts from such events.

The temporary restraining order prevents Moore Equipment Co. Inc., which does business as the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., from removing any funds raised from the bank or the state. Scott also is seeking to nullify the contract and obtain more money for the Lions Club.

DONALD MULACK, chief of the Charitable Trust Division, said the state is trying to have all the money solicited under the contract impounded until "we can find out how much is due the charity."

The state will also ask the court to prohibit the circus from doing business for charitable organizations in Illinois if "we find any fraud in the accounting of the circus," Mulack said.

Under the contract signed by the Schaumburg Lions Club, the circus would receive 100 per cent of all revenue from concessions; 90 per cent of revenue from reserved seat tickets sold by the circus on circus day; 50 per cent of revenue from all tickets sold in advance of circus day; and 50 per cent of all special child tickets sold in advance. The circus would also receive 25 per cent for advance promotional representatives or 75 per cent of tickets sold in advance by the Lions Club.

Scott's suit charges the circus with "committing a fraud on the Illinois public by purporting to raise money for charity when, in fact, most of the money will go to the fund-raisers (circus)."

MULACK SAID A review of out-of-state professional fund raisers, such as the Carson and Barnes Circus, showed the groups "take a disproportionate amount of money for themselves — 10 to 15 per cent." He said the Schaumburg Lions were probably receiving "less than 10 per cent."

Jack Holmes, a spokesman for the Schaumburg Lions Club, said his group was not aware the contract violated state law.

"We had the identical contract last year and no one said a word," he said.

Holmes said the Lions Club made about $2,200 on last year's circus but would probably break even this year because of poor attendance.

SIX OTHER ILLINOIS charitable organizations entered into identical contracts with Carson and Barnes, including the Libertyville Jaycees. These contracts also will be covered in the suit.

The Carson and Barnes circus also performed in Wheeling Aug. 5 to 8 at an event sponsored by the Cook County Police Assn. A CCPA spokesman said his group rented the circus for a flat fee and were not involved in splitting concession and reserved ticket fees.

The hearing for the preliminary injunction will be at 2 p.m. Friday before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen.

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again. Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers. From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABBOT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (688-5230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

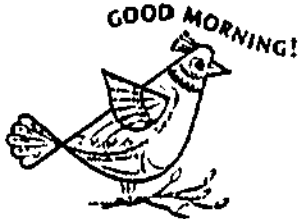

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

60-acre annex OK'd

The Village of Long Grove has annexed a 60-acre strip that would block Miller Builders from annexing property to the Village of Buffalo Grove.

Miller Builders had planned to build 415 townhouses and single-family units on a 147-acre site, commonly known as the Stielow property. The site is east of Old Hicks Road between Old Checker Road and the Lake-Cook county line.

The action by Long Grove ends a controversy that had been brewing among Long Grove, the developer, several property owners and residents.

IN ORDER TO annex the development site to Buffalo Grove, a 600-foot-wide strip of land had to be annexed, connecting the Stielow property to Buffalo Grove.

Long Grove, whose officials have opposed the development since it was introduced nearly a year ago, counteracted the proposed move by Miller

Builders by annexing part of the corridor before Buffalo Grove.

Long Grove objected to the housing project because of sewer, density, and traffic problems that could arise from the development.

"The annexation by Buffalo Grove would put them (village officials) in an area beyond their master plan," Long Grove Village Pres. Robert Coffin said.

"They would have a great deal of trouble servicing the area," Coffin added. "It is immediately in our backyard."

THE PROPOSAL by Miller angered residents of Country Club Estates which would border the new development if built. About 125 homeowners signed a petition objecting to the project.

The development firm originally filed a petition in Lake County Circuit Court to annex the strip to Buffalo Grove. Annexation to Buffalo Grove was desirable because of sewer facilities and the Lake County location.

The matter was complicated because of property owned by the Popp Family. The property also was sought by the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the Lake County Forest Preserve District for water retention and open space. The Popp family had said they were not interested in annexation to either village.

Miller Builders did receive a court ruling that annexation was legal, but attorneys removed the petition to correct discrepancies in the land description.

Meanwhile, Long Grove filed a petition to annex part of the corridor.

A COURT DECISION was needed in which Long Grove or Miller petitions took precedence. The court ruling was handed down two weeks ago in favor of Long Grove. The village approved annexation action last Tuesday.

The annexed property is owned by four owners, one of whom is the Popp Family. Coffin said the consent of the Popp Family to annex part of the farm to Long Grove was the key factor in the action.

"Long Grove is more open space minded than Buffalo Grove and it's possible that that could be a reason for their decision," Coffin said.

Richard Wexler, attorney for Miller Builders, said the annexation will not stop the development on the Stielow property. The developer can consider a different corridor to connect to Buffalo Grove — annexation to Long Grove or remain unincorporated.

Buffalo Grove woman lists woes

Board hears of racial harassment

by BETTY LEE

A woman approached Buffalo Grove officials Monday night with typewritten pages in her hand. She was there to sound out a grievance, one not often heard in the village.

Mrs. Atenogenesa Espinosa and her family are Filipino and have been residents of Buffalo Grove for nearly two years. But for most of the time, she said they have been subjected to a chain of racial nightmares.

Her typewritten pages list those events, beginning with an incident which happened during August of last year. Early one morning, she discovered spilled garbage under her parked car on the driveway.

That event was followed by another a month later. Someone had pulled out marigolds which decorated her home at 928 Beechwood Rd.

MRS. ESPINOSA said she moved to Buffalo Grove because she had "truly fallen in love" with the area. The "quiet peace in the village" was what prompted her to move there. Her son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren share the home. But she is beginning to regret the move to the village.

Last winter she went out to clean her car on her driveway when some teenagers across the street shouted racial slurs.

Mrs. Espinosa said the group of teen-agers repeated remarks such as "chop suey" and "go back to where you belong." After she ignored them, the youngsters disbanded.

The harassment did not stop, however. Her mailbox was uprooted from the ground and bricks were thrown on her lawn. Once a can of oil was spilled on a lawnmower. She shuddered at the thought that the can might have been filled with gasoline.

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in.

"I met almost every day and sometimes oftener with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My bus-

State sues circus to get more funds for Lions Club

by LINDA PUNCH

A temporary restraining order has been issued to protect money raised by the Schaumburg Lions Club at a circus Monday after the Illinois Attorney General's office filed suit against the circus owners.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott charged the owners of the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., an Oklahoma-based company, with forcing the Schaumburg Lions Club into an illegal contract. Scott said the contract is a "clear violation" of Illinois charitable trust laws which require charities to receive at least 75 per cent of gross receipts from such events.

The temporary restraining order prevents Moore Equipment Co. Inc., which does business as the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., from removing any funds raised from the bank or the state. Scott also is seeking to nullify the contract and obtain more money for the Lions Club.

DONALD MULACK, chief of the Charitable Trust Division, said the state is trying to have all the money solicited under the contract impounded until "we can find out how much is due the charity."

The state will also ask the court to prohibit the circus from doing business for charitable organizations in Illinois if "we find any fraud in the accounting of the circus," Mulack said.

Scouting news

Boy Scout Troop 211 of Buffalo Grove will sponsor a paper drive Sept. 6 at Alcott School, 530 Bernard Dr.

Collection hours will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. All proceeds will be donated to a fund for Bobby Libit, a 7-year-old Buffalo Grove boy who recently underwent a bone marrow transplant.

Pickup service is available. Anyone not able to drop paper off at the school should call Jim Sipchen at 541-6465 before Sept. 1 for free pickup.

If the paper drive is successful, the Scouts will sponsor the drive on a monthly basis, collecting paper on the first Saturday of each month.

Under the contract signed by the Schaumburg Lions Club, the circus would receive 100 per cent of all revenue from concessions; 90 per cent of revenue from reserved seat tickets sold by the circus on circus day; 50 per cent of revenue from all tickets sold in advance of circus day; and 50 per cent of all special child tickets sold in advance. The circus would also receive 25 per cent for advance promotional representatives or 75 per cent of tickets sold in advance by the Lions Club.

Scott's suit charges the circus with "committing a fraud on the Illinois public by purporting to raise money for charity when, in fact, most of the money will go to the fund-raisers (circus)."

MULACK SAID A review of out-of-state professional fund raisers, such as the Carson and Barnes Circus, showed the groups "take a disproportionate amount of money for themselves — 10 to 15 per cent." He said the Schaumburg Lions were probably receiving "less than 10 per cent."

Jack Holmes, a spokesman for the Schaumburg Lions Club, said his group was not aware the contract violated state law.

"We had the identical contract last year and no one said a word," he said.

Holmes said the Lions Club made about $2,200 on last year's circus but would probably break even this year because of poor attendance.

SIX OTHER ILLINOIS charitable organizations entered into identical contracts with Carson and Barnes, including the Libertyville Jaycees. These contracts also will be covered in the suit.

The Carson and Barnes circus also performed in Wheeling Aug. 5 to 8 at an event sponsored by the Cook County Police Assn. A CCPA spokesman said his group rented the circus for a flat fee and were not involved in splitting concession and reserved ticket fees.

The hearing for the preliminary injunction will be at 2 p.m. Friday before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen.

she said. The latest event happened two weeks ago when her house was burglarized.

THE THIEVES took an attache case, diamond ring, camera, costume jewelry of sentimental value — $600 in cash value.

Racial slurs and obscene pictures were drawn throughout the bedroom. Someone had deposited dog excrement by the grand-children's bedroom. "The losses can be replaced," she said, "but the ethnic slurs have done moral damage."

She asked trustees to spur action to help apprehend the vandals and to correct a situation that not only would affect her, but would affect others coming from all national backgrounds.

Village Pres. Edward A. Fabish apologized on behalf of the village and added that an investigation by police is being conducted.

Trustee Thomas Mahoney commended Mrs. Espinosa for her courage to come to the village meeting. "It's a reminder that there are ugly attitudes," he said.

Mahoney added that the vandalism probably is the work of two or three individuals and should not reflect the attitude of the entire community.

"This sort of thing is inexcusable regardless of the age of the perpetrators," Trustee Dorothy Carroll said.

$3,000 in furnishings damaged

Fire breaks out in moving van

Fire erupted Tuesday afternoon in a Global Van Lines trailer in Arlington Heights, damaging about $3,000 worth of furnishings.

The trailer, which was parked in the moving company's yard at 2512 S. Clearbrook Dr., also was severely damaged, but no estimates were available.

Fire officials said the cause of the fire was under investigation, but Ted Boyer, president of the company, said he suspected the blaze might be attributable to flammable liquids stored in some equipment. However, firefighters reported there was no gasoline in lawnmowers on the vehicle.

Global was moving possessions of Robert Matavina, Plymouth, Ind., to a home in Missouri, firefighters reported. The tractor-trailer was pulling into the Global lot when the driver noticed smoke coming from the trailer about 5:40 p.m.

Two fire engines were dispatched, and firefighters had to unload some of the belongings before extinguishing the fire, officials said.

Boyer said the furnishings and trailer were insured. "It was something beyond our control that it happened," he said.

Prospect may drop from state plan

by LYNN ASINOF

Financial considerations may force Mount Prospect to drop out of a group of five towns being considered for a state program which would help with the redevelopment of their central business districts.

However, officials from Arlington Heights, Palatine and Des Plaines said Tuesday they are still very interested in the program, which is estimated to cost each community around $2,500. Wilmette is the fifth community considering the program.

The state program is being developed to test a new manual prepared to help towns with downtown revitalization. Through the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, the state would hire a planner to be used in all of the participating communities to provide expertise during redevelopment.

THE STATE is putting $10,000 towards the $22,500 project, with the participating communities sharing the remainder of the expense.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said it is "very doubtful in my mind that we will participate" because funds are not available in the budget to finance the program.

Eppley said he had hoped the village could provide its share of the expense with "in-kind services" such as office space.

Robert L. Scott of the department of local government affairs, said the program just will not work without monetary contributions from the participating villages.

"It's hard to understand how in-kind really could cover all of one's local share of the contract," Scott said of the program. "We're talking about hiring a planner. We are talking about dollars that have to be spent in hiring a person."

SCOTT SAID TALKS with the villages are still tentative, but estimated contracts with participating towns will be signed by the end of September.

Arlington Heights officials also are hoping to meet their commitment to the program by offering in-kind rather than financial contributions.

"We're very interested in the program," said Joe Kesler, Arlington Heights village planner. "The only problem is the village must provide funds and we're in the middle of the budget year."

Kesler said the village may try to work out a combination money, staff-time and office space contribution to the program. "I'm sure we'll be in it one way or the other," he said.

Des Plaines officials are interested in the program, although Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning, said he has not yet discussed monetary matters with the mayor and city council.

RICHARDSON SAID the program would be most valuable by providing market analysis and shopper surveys to find out what types of business the city should attract to the downtown area.

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said the village is interested in the program and has informally discussed contributing between $3,000 and $5,000, depending on "the type of program." He said the village also reserves the right to back out of the program.

Jones said the village needs a detailed market analysis of each of the downtown areas. "I see it is a very necessary situation prior to the next step of passing a downtown redevelopment ordinance," he said, noting the program would be worth it if Palatine could get its market analysis as a result.

Shortage of funds delays crime-prevention program

A planned crime-prevention program for Buffalo Grove faces delay until the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission is able to provide financing.

The police department had planned to put the program into effect upon receipt of a $55,000 grant requested last April, but commission officials have told police that available money has run out.

The department currently conducts some anticrime programs but cannot set up its crime prevention bureau that would be staffed by two full-time officers until a grant is received.

"THE AMOUNT set aside for this purpose was used up," said Alice Haddix of the ILEC. "If more money becomes available," she said, however, Buffalo Grove will again be considered for a grant.

In a comprehensive plan, the commission set aside some $287,900 in state and federal funds for crime prevention programs but Ms. Haddix said a number of other police departments were also seeking funds.

Planned in Buffalo Grove are a variety of programs to "educate the general public" in methods of deterring such crimes as burglaries, thefts, rapes and home invasions, police Sgt. Kenneth Blanchette said.

Local businessmen and residents would be taught methods of securing their buildings and establishments against break-ins, Blanchette said. A three-part drug abuse program would also be started with a grant, he said.

Ms. Haddix said she was uncertain when additional money might become available but said extra allotments may come before the end of the calendar year.

Planners to review town center ideas

Buffalo Grove Plan Commission members will meet today to review three plans for the development of the proposed town center.

The plans were drafted by Economics Research Associates, Alan B. Voorhees and Troup and Olson, firms hired by the village to make feasibility studies.

The town center, which will be designed to accommodate many services and shops, is proposed for the central business district, north of Lake-Cook Road between Ill. Rte. 83 and Buffalo Grove Road.

Commission members are expected to make a recommendation to the village board on one of the plans.

A representative from Centex Homes Corp., developer of the Winston Square development near Welland Road and Ill. Rte. 83 in Lake County, will appear before the commission to present plan changes.

The changes will include a variation in the type of housing to be offered in the development and a possible lowering of density.

Gregg Builders of the Oak Creek apartments will make a presentation of its third building phase. Also on the agenda is review of an engineering report from Levitt and Sons Inc., developer of Strathmore Grove, for final official approval.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Village approves trading of 2 pieces of property

Buffalo Grove trustees have approved an exchange of village property for similar property near the Ranch Mart Shopping Center.

The trade will be made with Albert Frank and Associates, developer of the shopping center. It will enable the developer to pave a driveway to enter the shopping center.

The village owns 3,000 square feet of land south of Well No. 4, which is planned for a water reservoir. Plans are to exchange the village property south of the well for property north of the pumping facilities.

Before the village board grants approval, the developer must relocate a fence at the exchanged village property.

Village Engineer Arnold Seaberg also recommended the developer assist in the relocation of gas, telephone and electric utilities if they are in the way of the future water reservoir.

The developer must follow piping revisions at the well house, according to village specifications. The village also must be named in an easement document to allow village access to the well site.

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABBOT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (688-5238).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

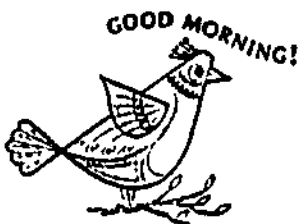

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Bonds OK'd for parking

The Des Plaines City Council has voted to proceed with plans to sell general-obligation bonds to finance $3 million in parking facilities to serve the proposed Superblock project.

The action, taken Monday night, represents a major change in financing plans for the parking facilities. Until recently, city officials planned to finance the four-story garage and other parking improvements with revenue bonds.

Revenue bonds would have been paid off with parking revenue from city parking lots, while the general-obligation bonds will require the use of city tax money if parking revenue is inadequate.

The proposal to sell general-obligation bonds was approved 10 to 6. Ald. George Olen, 2nd; Robert Sullivan, 2nd; Arthur Erbach, 5th; Carmen Sarlo, 6th; Robert Kraves, 6th, and Gerald Meyer, 7th, opposed the sale of general-obligation bonds.

EDWARD BENJAMIN, the city's bond consultant, and Mayor Herbert H. Behrel have predicted parking revenue will be adequate to pay off the bonds, but several aldermen said they fear city money may be needed.

City officials began discussing financing parking facilities with general-obligation bonds several weeks ago after Benjamin told them revenue bonds would not be marketable.

Sullivan and Kraves said they were undecided and added the city should study the matter further before making a commitment to sell general-obligation bonds.

"Apparently the smart money won't handle this thing," Sullivan said. "Now we are being asked to go to the dumb money — general-obligation bonds — which will be backed by the taxpayers."

ALD. JOHN LEER, 3rd, chairman of the buildings, grounds and parking lots committee which recommended general-obligation bonds be used, said a decision was important so completion of the parking facilities coincides with the redevelopment of the downtown area.

"It is up to the city council tonight to move ahead with this or lose what we've been trying to gain over the last 10 years," Leer said. "I think it would be an absolute crime to hold this thing down."

Ald. Joseph Szabo, 1st, said the city should move ahead with the project to avoid paying increased costs for the parking facilities.

Ald. John Seitz, 7th, said he believes financing the project with general-obligation bonds is the only option open to the city.

"I see no alternative but this to the further decay of the downtown area," he said. "If we don't rebuild we will have a ghost town."

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, said he also sees no alternative to the sale of general-obligation bonds.

"There are risks, but they are risks we are going to have to take," he said. "We're talking about rebuilding the downtown area, and I think we really have to move ahead with this project."

BEFORE THE COUNCIL'S vote, Ald. Richard Ward, 8th, and Sullivan predicted annual revenue generated by Superblock will fall $22,000 to $88,000 short of the amount needed to

Funding near for Superblock retail center

Mayor Herbert H. Behrel Tuesday said the developers of the proposed Superblock project, the major phase of the city's downtown redevelopment, should have financing for the shopping center segment of the project next week.

The mayor's remarks came during his regular weekly press conference, but he declined to reveal who would provide financing for the project.

"If I told which savings and loan then people would start calling there and I don't think the developers are ready for a formal announcement," Behrel said.

HE HINTED THE loan would probably come from a Chicago area savings and loan association. Representatives of J. R. Gottlieb and Co., the chief developers of the project, secured financing from a Philadelphia lending group, after unsuccessfully negotiating with several insurance companies for nearly a year.

The Superblock project involves construction of a 10-story office building and a multiple-level shopping center. The developers recently announced they had received financing

Prospect may drop from state plan

by LYNN ASINOF

Financial considerations may force Mount Prospect to drop out of a group of five towns being considered for a state program which would help with the redevelopment of their central business districts.

However, officials from Arlington Heights, Palatine and Des Plaines said Tuesday they are still very interested in the program, which is estimated to cost each community around $2,500. Wilmette is the fifth community considering the program.

The state program is being developed to test a new manual prepared to help towns with downtown revitalization. Through the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, the state would hire a planner to be used in all of the participating communities to provide expertise during redevelopment.

THE STATE IS putting $10,000 towards the $22,500 project, with the participating communities sharing the remainder of the expense.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said it is "very doubtful in my mind that we will participate" because funds are not available in the budget to finance the program.

Eppley said he had hoped the village could provide its share of the expense with "in-kind services" such as office space.

Robert L. Scott of the department of local government affairs, said the program just will not work without monetary contributions from the participating villages.

"It's hard to understand how in-kind really could cover all of one's local share of the contract," Scott said of the program. "We're talking about hiring a planner. We are talking about dollars that have to be spent in hiring a person."

SCOTT SAID TALKS with the villages are still tentative, but estimated contracts with participating towns will be signed by the end of September.

Arlington Heights officials also are hoping to meet their commitment to

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in."

"I met almost every day and sometimes oftener with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

City Council wrapup

Ordinance OKd for hospital bonds

The Des Plaines City Council Monday night approved an ordinance enabling the city to issue tax-exempt revenue bonds to assist hospitals.

At the same time, aldermen gave final approval to an ordinance to allow the city to sell up to $12 million in tax-exempt revenue bonds to refinance an expansion program at Holy Family Hospital.

The bonds will be paid off with operating funds from the hospital and will have no effect on the city's tax rate or ability to issue bonds for city projects.

Both ordinances were approved 14-2 by the city council, with Ald. Carmen J. Sarlo, 6th, and Gerald J. Meyer, 7th, voting against adoption.

Sarlo has said he opposes the bond sale, because interest rates on future city loans could adversely be affected if the hospital defaults on retiring the bonds.

Meyer said he thinks the city should study the possible effects of the Holy Family bond sale and similar requests before approving further sales. "I think we have been advancing much too rapidly," he said.

Proceeds from the bond sale will be used to pay for construction of an intensive and coronary care unit, several private physicians' offices, an auditorium, meeting rooms and expansion of laboratory, radiology and other ancillary services. Construction is expected to be completed next summer.

Ald. Charles Bolck, 3rd, chairman of the city council finance committee, said the low-interest bonds will save the hospital up to $200,000 a year in interest costs.

Traffic signal approved

The city council has approved the installation of a traffic signal at Golf Road and Sixth Avenue.

The state recently approved the signal, but the city will have to pay for its installation. City Engineer Robert E. Bowen estimates the signal will cost about $50,000.

Officials had planned to put the signal in next year's city budget, but Meyer has asked the city to look into the possibility of finding money for the project before that time.

The city council also gave preliminary approval to an ordinance that would prohibit parking on the east side of Oakton Place and deferred action on a proposal to erect stop signs at Wicke Avenue and Cora Street.

Garbage service expanded

City officials have agreed to change an ordinance and extend city garbage service to multiple-family buildings with up to 10 units.

Until now, the city only has picked up trash at buildings with four or less units, but agreed to review the ordinance after receiving a request from occupants of a seven-unit townhouse building on Chestnut Street.

Although aldermen agreed to revise the ordinance, the service only will be extended if all residents in a given building agree to subscribe to the city's garbage service.

Mill widening pact let

The city council has awarded a contract for about $106,000 to the J. A. Johnson Paving Co., Arlington Heights, for the widening of Mill Street between River Road and the county forest preserve. The firm was the lowest of two bidders.

Teachers to work under old pact

by JUDY JOBBITT

Teachers in Des Plaines Dist. 62 will return to school this fall under the terms of last year's contract until the 1975-76 contract is completed.

The board of education Monday approved extending last year's contract indefinitely with teachers returning to work under the same salary and fringe benefits agreed to last year.

"It was initiated by the teachers union to have the contract extended," said James Chikulas, Illinois Education Assn. representative for Des Plaines Education Assn. He said the extension establishes policies for teachers and the board to follow during the interim period.

The extension also sets up a five-day warning period so that either the DPEA or the school board can cancel the interim agreement by giving the other side five days' notice, he said.

Last year's agreement includes a "no strike" clause which prohibits teachers from withholding services to the district. If teachers should decide to strike, they would have to first terminate the interim agreement which would give the district five days' notice.

Negotiations are in process with another meeting scheduled Tuesday. The salary schedule and the section on class size, reduction of staff and pupil discipline are being discussed.

General obligation bonds for parking

pay off the general-obligation bonds.

Ward said he does not oppose the sale of general-obligation bonds, but he believes it is important to remember the project will "not pay for itself."

"I don't want anyone to think this thing is going to be the big bonanza that some people have said it will be," Ward said.

City Treasurer Thomas Mahon suggested the city conduct a referendum before making a decision, but the proposal received little support from the city council.

"You're asking the taxpayers to underwrite this thing with general-obligation bonds, so why not go to them and ask them in a referendum if that's what they want?" Mahon said.

SUPERBLOCK, the first phase of the downtown redevelopment plan, will consist of an office building and retail shopping area. Construction of the office building is scheduled to start this fall.

The proposed parking facilities to be built by the city to serve the $6.4 million project will consist of a parking deck on Ellinwood Street and improvements to the lot on Pearson Street. The city has agreed to provide additional parking as part of an agreement with the Superblock developers. The deck will cost about $1.3 million. Land acquisition and construction of a ground level lot will account for the rest of the bond issue.

Benjamin has predicted the city will save about $450,000 in interest by using general-obligation bonds instead of revenue bonds to finance the parking facilities. He estimates a $3,075,000 bond issue will be needed to finance the project with general-obligation bonds.

Superblock retail units' funds near for the office building. The project will be constructed at the corner of Lee and Prairie streets.

The mayor also indicated the city would consider constructing a pedestrian overpass from the Ellinwood Street parking garage to the Chicago and North Western Ry. train station.

THE OVERPASS suggestion was raised Monday after an alderman suggested reopening a ground-level pedestrian crossing between the depot and Ellinwood Street to improve access to the parking garage and shopping center.

Behrel said the crossing was closed about 15 years ago after several persons were killed.

He added that if the overpass is built from the depot to the garage a set of stairs may be constructed to the center track to enable commuters to cross that set of tracks to board trains without walking a block to get around present barriers.

the program by offering in-kind rather than financial contributions.

"We're very interested in the program," said Joe Kesler, Arlington Heights village planner. "The only problem is the village must provide funds and we're in the middle of the budget year."

Kesler said the village may try to work out a combination money, staff-time and office space contribution to the program. "I'm sure we'll be in it one way or the other," he said.

Des Plaines officials are interested in the program, although Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning, said he has not yet discussed monetary matters with the mayor and city council.

RICHARDSON SAID the program would be most valuable by providing market analysis and shopper surveys to find out what types of business the city should attract to the downtown area.

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E.

Fall hearings seen on Mikva anti-noise bill

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, Friday said he hopes the Congress will hold hearings in the fall on his bill to create local boards to develop standards to reduce aircraft noise pollution.

Mikva made a progress report on the legislative package during a news conference Friday. He said he has talked with several congressional leaders about the hearings.

"I am hoping for hearings to get under way in the fall," Mikva said.

The congressman said other legislation, such as his bill to abolish some regulatory agencies including the Civil Aeronautics Board, also have increased public attention on the airline industry which might speed legislative action.

UNDER MIKVA'S plan, an airport noise pollution control board would be established for every airport if 60 per cent of the persons living in the airport's noise impact area are not residents of the city which owns the airport.

Although O'Hare International Airport is a prime target of Mikva's proposal, the congressman has said a number of other airports throughout the country also have the same problem.

Mikva also noted the airlines are making greater progress in adjusting older aircraft in an effort to reduce noise from those planes. He added various environmental agencies also are pressing to regulate various types of aircraft pollution.

"THE PRESSURE coming from legislation and consumer complaints is beginning to have some effect," Mikva said.

He indicated the increased pressure may make some agencies more aware of regulations which would aid consumers.

"I FIND IT incredible that any agency would refuse to allow the industry it regulates to lower its prices and then claim this was being done to protect consumers," Mikva said.

THE CONGRESSMAN has noted if his regulatory proposal is approved, suggestions currently being proposed by various environmental groups could be implemented.

The proposal would allow the local boards to develop guidelines. Challenges to the guidelines would have to be made to the CAB or Federal Aviation Administration only if the rule had an adverse effect on safety or proved to be commercially impractical.

Despite $1 million deficit

Willis vows village taxes to stay low

Elk Grove Village officials Tuesday pledged the municipality will continue to enjoy one of the lowest municipal tax rates in the Northwest suburbs, despite the fact the village must find some way to compensate for a budget deficit of $1 million.

Village Mgr. Charles Willis said the board has directed him to shave $500,000 off the recently approved $8 million budget.

Willis would not speculate on the budget cuts or from where the additional $500,000 would come.

"Frankly, I don't know where any of the money will come from; we thought the budget was close to begin with," he said.

WILLIS SAID THE board is not expected to raise its tax levy at Tuesday's board meeting, although the municipality has expanded taxing power under home-rule status.

Several members of the board favor a utility tax, although the consensus of the board is to put a freeze on some promised services rather than tax its residents.

Several members of the board discussed the following means of economizing:

- Postponing construction of a proposed fire station west of Rte. 53.
- Placing a temporary freeze on longevity raises for employees.
- Selling a village-owned $1 million site once proposed for use as a multi-purpose arena.

• Trimming the staff in the building department due to the drop in construction.

Willis said the board has decided it will not act to impose any additional tax until it has exhausted every possible means of cutting expenses.

Village officials will review Willis' recommendations in October and re-examine the community's financial condition.

"At that point, it will be the officials' decision on what new services will not be added, which, if any, will be cut back, or whether they will reconsider adopting a utility or other tax," he said.

Fire captain narrowly escapes death

Donald Kuhn, a captain with the Elk Grove Village Fire Dept., Monday escaped death in a freak accident when he slipped and was pinned between the tractor-cab and ladder of a heavy piece of fire equipment.

Kuhn was reported in good condition at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, where he was treated for a broken rib and torn cartilage in his rib cage.

According to fire department reports, Kuhn was conducting a drivers' training session in the Elk Grove High School parking lot practicing turns with a fire engine.

During one of the turns Kuhn, who was standing on a running board, lost his balance and fell between the cab and trailer.

Lt. Fred Henning, who had been standing next to Kuhn, shouted emergency directions to the driver and tiller man handling the ladder-tractor end of the equipment.

Kuhn Tuesday said the instant reaction of the men saved his life. They obeyed an order to straighten out the truck, although the maneuver was contrary to the procedure being practiced.

"The driver and tiller man never knew what happened and had no way of knowing I was trapped and if they had completed the turn, well, things would have been bad for me," said Kuhn.

Age limit may be lowered for kindergarten pupils

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 is considering allowing children born between Dec. 1 and March 1 to enter kindergarten early.

Currently, children must be 5 years old on or before Dec. 1, 1975, to enter kindergarten this year. The school board Monday directed the administration to look into the possibility of letting up to 20 children enroll in kindergarten this year who will turn 5 after the Dec. 1 deadline.

Supt. Roger Bardwell said the administration has received several requests from parents who want their children to enter kindergarten a year early. He said they feel their children are mature enough to start kindergarten, although their youngsters were born after the Dec. 1 deadline.

BARDWELL SAID the program would not cost additional money this year, although the district will not receive state aid for children born after the Dec. 1 deadline. He said the district can place up to 20 youngsters into classes already set for this year.

Toni Kane, learning disability teacher at Byrd School, Elk Grove Village, said she has reservations about the program because "many parents feel their children are ready

'Mayor' is a flag waver

by DAVE GALANTI

Each summer, Fritz Frazier decides to host a little party for about 150 persons in his Elk Grove Village neighborhood.

The guest list includes residents of his Eden Road block, friends and especially children. The purpose is always the same: to celebrate on July 4 the birth of the United States and its achievements.

"I'm not a patriot, I want to be, but I'm not," said Frazier, explaining why he held the yearly ceremonies in the yard in front of his house. "But I think that people have got to believe in this country. If they are strong in themselves we'll be all right."

THE "MAYOR" OF Eden Road, as he is affectionately called by his neighbors, started the program for just his family and a couple of neighborhood children in 1963. An ex-fighter pilot in the Air Force during the Korean War, he said the first ceremony consisted only of raising a flag on a bracket attached to his garage.

"The Vietnam War was not going well and the guys in the service were not being looked up to," said Frazier. "I just wanted to tell my kids what

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in.

"I met almost every day and sometimes oftener with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

'Mayor' is a flag waver

things are good in this country."

Frazier said he often is surprised at how large the whole effort has become. The father of six children, he said he originally aimed the program at them to "tell them what it was to be a good American," but then parents and other children on the block also became involved.

"Every year there are more and more people. Even neighbors who have moved out of Elk Grove drive back for the ceremony. To me, it's just a good old flag-raising picnic," he said.

This year's celebration, Frazier said, included a flag-raising ceremony by the local VFW and speeches about the Declaration of Independence in honor of the Bicentennial. He said he has started to circulate invitations and still serves drinks and popcorn to give the event the flavor of a celebration.

ALTHOUGH HE SAID he felt he was not a very good public speaker, Frazier said he resigned himself to make the yearly speeches after he attempted to elect another "mayor" to handle the oratory. The election went through as planned, but the new "mayor" was not interested in making public speeches before 150 persons either, he said.

But despite the minor problems involved, Frazier said he always is ready to start planning for next year's celebration.

"I think people want to be good citizens," he said. "I am proud of where I live. People are good and that's worth putting in a little extra for."

Frazier said he hopes the ceremonies inform people as well as entertain them. But, he said, he feels the major benefits return to him.

"It's just great for me," he said. "It is a great satisfaction to be able to say I like this country."

NEXT YEAR, Frazier said the celebration will probably be the largest ever. In fact, he is the only person to be listed as an event in the village's calendar of Bicentennial events.

The highlight of the ceremony will be the unveiling of a flag that flew over the Capitol building in Washington, D. C., obtained for him by the village.

"The flag is something we'll treasure very much," he said. "It's a very large one, but we won't just fold it up and put it in a plastic bag. It'll get flown every day."

when they're not."

Several parents Monday spoke in favor of the program, saying an arbitrary date should not determine who is ready for kindergarten.

Darrell Crouch, 2011 Scott Terr., Mount Prospect, said, "We'd at least like to have the chance to have them accepted rather than have an arbitrary age level. If they're ready, they should go." He has a child whose birthday falls between the extension dates.

THE BOARD is waiting to see what response the district gets before approving the program. If the response is too great, Bardwell said it might not be possible to implement the program this year because of the limited number of openings. The board will decide on the program at the Sept. 2 meeting.

Parents interested in the program, who have children becoming 5 between Dec. 1 and March 1, 1976, should write a letter to the administration by Sept. 2. The letter should explain why they believe their youngster is ready to enter kindergarten early, said Bardwell.

The child and parents will be interviewed by a group of psychologists and kindergarten teachers to determine whether the child is mature enough to enter kindergarten early.

If the program is approved, parents will be notified about their child's acceptance by Sept. 15.

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABBOT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (688-5230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

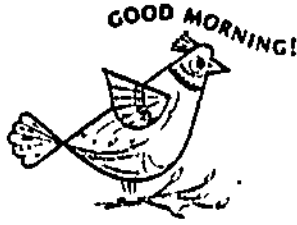

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Lions Club victimized?

State sues circus in charity probe

by LINDA PUNCH

A temporary restraining order has been issued to protect money raised by the Schaumburg Lions Club at a circus Monday after the Illinois Attorney General's office filed suit against the circus owners.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott charged the owners of the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., an Oklahoma-based company, with forcing the Schaumburg Lions Club into an illegal contract. Scott said the contract is a "clear violation" of Illinois charitable trust laws which require charities to receive at least 75 per cent of gross receipts from such events.

The temporary restraining order prevents Moore Equipment Co. Inc., which does business as the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., from removing any funds raised from the bank or the state. Scott also is seeking to nullify the contract and obtain more money for the Lions Club.

DONALD MULACK, chief of the Charitable Trust Division, said the state is trying to have all the money solicited under the contract impounded until "we can find out how much is due the charity."

The state will also ask the court to prohibit the circus from doing business for charitable organizations in Illinois if "we find any fraud in the accounting of the circus," Mulack said.

Under the contract signed by the Schaumburg Lions Club, the circus would receive 100 per cent of all revenue from concessions; 90 per cent of revenue from reserved seat tickets sold by the circus on circus day; 50 per cent of revenue from all tickets sold in advance of circus day; and 50 per cent of all special child tickets sold in advance. The circus would also receive 25 per cent for advance promotional representatives or 75 per cent of tickets sold in advance by the Lions Club.

Scott's suit charges the circus with "committing a fraud on the Illinois public by purporting to raise money for charity when, in fact, most of the money will go to the fund-raisers (circus)"

MULACK SAID A review of out-of-state professional fund raisers, such as the Carson and Barnes Circus, showed the groups "take a disproportionate amount of money for themselves — 10 to 15 per cent." He said the Schaumburg Lions were probably receiving "less than 10 per cent."

Jack Holmes, a spokesman for the Schaumburg Lions Club, said his group was not aware the contract violated state law.

"We had the identical contract last year and no one said a word," he said.

Holmes said the Lions Club made about $2,200 on last year's circus but would probably break even this year because of poor attendance.

SIX OTHER ILLINOIS charitable organizations entered into identical contracts with Carson and Barnes, including the Libertyville Jaycees. These contracts also will be covered in the suit.

The Carson and Barnes circus also performed in Wheeling Aug. 5 to 8 at an event sponsored by the Cook County Police Assn. A CCPA spokesman said his group rented the circus for a flat fee and were not involved in splitting concession and reserved ticket fees.

The hearing for the preliminary injunction will be at 2 p.m. Friday before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen.

FUNDS RAISED BY the Schaumburg Lions Club in Monday's performances of Carson and Barnes Circus were impounded by a Circuit Court order after it was learned more than 75 per cent of gross ticket sales would go to the circus company rather than to aid blind and visually handicapped persons as club members said they were led to believe when a contract was signed. Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott is trying to nullify the contract and obtain more money for the Lions Club. The event was at Atcher Park, Springinguth Road.

Centex proposes school annexations

by MARILYN McDONALD

A spokesman for Centex Homes of Illinois Inc. said his company will be annexing the entire new Centex project in Hoffman Estates to Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 and High School Dist. 211.

David Webber, a Centex official, said his company "would pursue" the legal procedures for annexation with Dist. 15 and Dist. 211. Webber did not say when Centex would approach the boards.

The 940-unit single-family subdivision, approved by the Hoffman Estates Village Board Monday, is on 336 acres near Algonquin and Freeman roads in Palatine and Barrington townships. All land east of Freeman Road would be in Dist. 15 or Dist. 211. Homes built west of Freeman Road would be in Barrington Township Unit Dist. 220.

THE BULK of the development, 610 units will be in Dist. 220. But Dist. 220 officials say they want no more children in their district. Any children they might get from the new Centex development would be bused nine miles to Carpentersville, they say.

On the other hand, Dist. 15 officials have accepted a 10-acre school site plus a $32,900 cash contribution for the part of the development already in their district. Dist. 211 board members expressed willingness to annex the Barrington Township portion of the new development if they could annex the development west to Barrington Road and north to Bradwell Road.

In order to legally annex the Barrington Township portion of the development, all three districts would have to submit petitions to the Cook County Educational Service Region. Hearings would be held on the proposal, and a hearing board would then approve or disapprove the move.

DIST. 15 Supt. Frank Whiteley said no one has formally approached that school board to annex the Dist. 220 land. Dist. 15 officials have not talked with Dist. 211 officials about the possible annexation, he said.

Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze said the board expressed interest in annexation on the strength of what it read in local press accounts about the new development. "No one approached us in an official way," Kolze said.

Webber said that Centex hopes to build its model homes this year, with construction of some of the first homes this year also

Keep those garbage cans hidden: village

Hoffman Estates officials are putting a lid on garbage — literally — violators of the revised village ordinance can expect to be "canned" with a fine.

The revision prohibits residents from putting out trash before sunset on the day before pickup or to leave trash cans out after 10 p.m. on the pickup day.

The old ordinance set 7 p.m. as the time when garbage could be placed at curbsides for pickup, but some trustees complained that many have ignored the time and place garbage out earlier than 7 p.m. They said the trash is unsightly and offensive, particularly in the summer.

THE SUNSET TIME designation is aimed at curbing the hours in which trash will stand out, but Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter scoffed at the plan, calling it too vague to be effectively enforced by police and in the courts.

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in."

"I met almost every day and sometimes oftener with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 3,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford"

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

Kiwanis nut sale Sept. 26

Members of Twinbrook Kiwanis Club will hold their annual peanut sale from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 26. Proceeds will be used for youth activities in Schaumburg Township.

"Money raised in the sale is used for projects such as park improvements, camperships to send needy local kids to camp, donations to needy families and various community organizations," said Barry Pass, project chairman.

Pass said a goal of $15,000 has been established for the project. Funds collected last year totaled $4,000.

Village to issue two liquor licenses

Two new liquor licenses will be issued soon in Schaumburg. Nick Barone recently told village trustees he plans to purchase and renovate The Big Banjo, 601 Town Square.

Barone said the operation will remain a family restaurant with a service bar. It will be one of 12 Barone's pizza restaurants in the Chicago area, he said.

Representatives of the Red Lobster said the restaurant is scheduled to open on Mail Drive in Woodfield Shopping Center in early March. The 6,600-square-foot building will seat 12 to 15 patrons in a bar area separate from the dining room.

Pen-pals sought for girl in hospital

by STEVE BROWN

It was only the second day of summer vacation when tragedy struck the Venegas family of Hanover Park. An auto accident left one daughter dead and two others injured, one so severely that she may not walk for a year.

Anna Marie Venegas, a pretty 13-year-old, was excited about the vacation and about the prospect of entering Hoffman Estates High School this year, but now she lies in a hospital several hundred miles from home.

The accident, which occurred near the southwest Missouri town of Sarcos, left the whole family in a state of shock, but Anna remains the most seriously injured.

Anna Marie Venegas

Another sister, Nancy, 15, is expected to be released from the hospital this week. She will return to Hoffman Estates High School this year.

"ANNA MARIE has always been an active girl, she was a cheerleader, a candy-stripper," Mrs. Aurora Costa, a sister, told The Herald.

She went on to say that a note or card or letter from local residents, especially young people might go a long way towards cheering Anna up. "This would let her know that people do care and she is not all alone," Mrs. Costa added.

Anyone wishing to write to Anna can send their letters to McCune-Brooks Hospital, Carthage, Mo. Room 305.

Although the Venegas family recently moved into the area, Mrs. Costa thought maybe a few other young people who will be entering Hoffman Estates High School might be interested in becoming a pen pal with her sister.

"She is going through so much right now she needs all the love and prayers that anyone can give her," she said.

The family plans to travel to and from the hospital until Anna Marie is recovered, but it is their hope a few new letter-writing friends might speed her recovery.

Village newsletter in need of a name

Schaumburg residents are being asked to name the new quarterly village newsletter to be distributed next month.

Village Pres. Raymond Kessel urged residents to take an active role in selecting a name for the newsletter.

Kessel said the first, or fall issue of the newsletter, will be distributed "nameless" in September, because a selection will not be made in time for publication.

"The next issue, the winter newsletter, will carry the selected name and a story on the winner and runners-up," he said.

RESIDENTS ARE being encouraged to send in suggested newsletter names immediately to Kessel at Schaumburg Civic Center, 101 S. Schaumburg Ct. Entries also may be delivered to the Civic Center.

Kessel emphasized all entries will be judged "on their own merits, as judges will not see the submitter's name or address, and judging will be based on appropriateness and originality."

Competition is open to all residents of Schaumburg, who may enter as many names as they wish, he said.

Judging will be done by a panel of area newspaper reporters, which includes Craig Howard, The Advisor; Pat Gerlach, The Herald; Drew Davis, The Record; Rick Romano, Suburban Week; Tom Witosky, The Trib; and Laura Carey, The Voice.

KESSELL SAID a specially designed plaque will be presented to the winner and a duplicate will be placed in the village hall.

Kessel stressed the purpose of the newsletter is to keep residents "better informed in an interesting manner about the village officials who serve you; actions they are taking on your behalf" and other factual community information.

The newsletter will be written by Mary Edgren, village communications counselor. Miss Edgren, with 30 years of public relations experience, operates her own business in Schaumburg.

Homeowners plan flea market sale

Members of Schaumburg Township South Homeowners' Assn. will hold their first annual flea market and community sale Sept. 6 and 7 in an open field on the east side of Roselle Road, south of Nerge Road.

Individuals and nonprofit community organizations will be offered free space at the display area, but a service charge of 10 per cent of gross sales or $10 will be charged each participant, said John Nicholson vice president of the association.

Sale items will be offered from 8 a.m. to dark Sept. 6 and from noon to 6 p.m. Sept. 7.

All proceeds will be used for community projects, Nicholson said. Further information can be obtained by calling Nicholson at 894-8635.

Keep those trash cans hidden: village

but added she would not formally veto the measure.

In criticizing the revision, Mrs. Hoyer said police do not have time to devote to ticketing garbage violators and told trustees, "If you want this enforced as such, you should support an increase in manpower (for the police department)."

Despite her criticism, the measure was approved by a unanimous 4-0 vote, with Trustees William Palmer and Ralph Lyerla absent.

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABBOT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (888-5230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

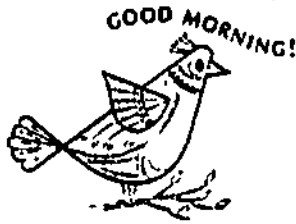

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Meadow Edge zoning

Project shift mulled tonight

A special zoning commission will meet tonight to review plans for 150 houses included in the latest phase of the Meadow Edge development.

Zale Construction Co., developers of the project north of Old Plum Grove Road between Quentin and Plum Grove roads, want to relocate a group of the houses to an area originally planned for townhouses. The townhouses would be shifted to the single-house area.

The changes must be considered by the special zoning commission according to city council law, although the plan commission already has recommended approval of the new phase.

The 37-acre section is being added to the development that includes 225 townhouses already in progress on 25 acres. The city council has raised no questions or objections to the phase, beyond calling for the zoning commission hearing.

The hearing is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall, 3600 Kirchoff Rd.

Village Old West Fest gets started Thursday

The Old West, complete with singing cowboys, dance hall girls and even a gunfight or two, will come alive Thursday for the annual West Fest at the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center.

A replica of a frontier town will be set up at one end of the parking lot where a variety of special entertainment will be featured through Sunday. There also will be carnival rides, game and refreshment booths and a sidewalk sale.

The Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce bratwurst booth and a beer booth operated by the Rolling Meadows Hockey Club will be open for lunch at noon Thursday. Other food and game booths sponsored by various community organizations plan to be ready for business about 5 p.m.

On stage in the western saloon at 7 p.m. Thursday will be members of Girl Scout Troop 71, who will perform an Indian dance. At 8 p.m., the Rolling Meadows High School Orchestral group will become dance hall girls for a special show. They will be followed by a musical quartet of other local high school students who call themselves "The Sahara."

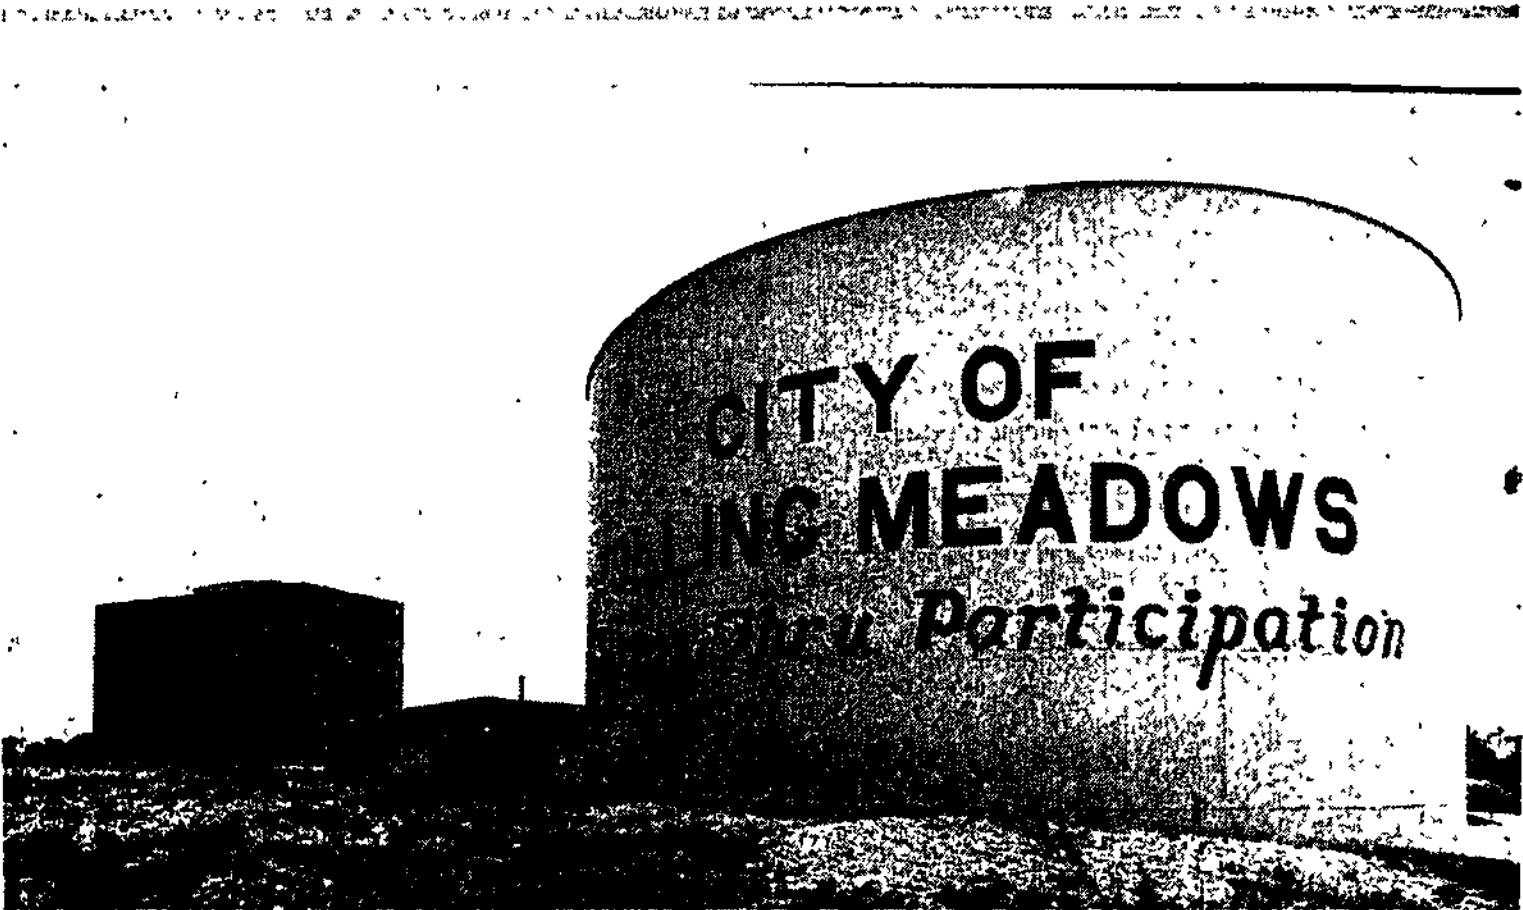

THE ORCHESTRAL group will give a second show at 7:30 p.m. Friday to warm up the crowd for a good old fashioned hoedown. "Fog" Thompson will be the caller for square dancers from 8 to 10 p.m.

Saturday afternoon, youngsters will be treated to a magic show by cowgirl Martene Martin. Her act will begin about 3 p.m.

Little Richard's Polka Band will provide a change of pace Saturday night when they play for dancing between 7 and 11 p.m.

A number of unscheduled events will occur at various times during West Fest, including simulated gunfights. Strolling guitar players also will wander through the carnival.

In addition to the wares of shopping center merchants on display for the sidewalk sale, the Rolling Meadows Friends of the Library chapter will sell used book.

ALTHOUGH IT'S A landmark of sorts, the faded blue city water storage tank near the Northwest Tollway isn't very pretty. The public works department plans to give it a facelift so the tank will fit in better with its fancy neighbors like the Gould Center. The tank probably will be painted brown next spring.

How now brown tow---er?

City may paint faded blue tower chocolate brown as an 'earth color' to blend in with surroundings

by JILL BETTNER

Picasso's "The Bather" in the Gould Center, Rolling Meadows, may soon be flanked by another even more unusual work of art—a chocolate brown water tower.

It will be a challenge, but plans are to turn the squat, faded blue tower, near the Northwest Tollway, that proclaims Rolling Meadows the city of "Progress thru Participation" into something beautiful. If not exactly a work of art, the city's public works department hopes to make the tower a more esthetically pleasing facility that will blend better with the lush grounds of the Gould Center and neighboring industries.

A spokesman for the department said a group of businessmen in the area contacted the city engineer last year, offering assistance in any plans to beautify the tower or the nearby city trash compactor station.

THE TOWER built in the late 1960s, is due for a paint job anyway, so the businessmen recently were asked for suggestions.

Chocolate brown was recommended by the Digital Equipment Corp. next to the Gould Center as an "earth color" that would do nicely. An off-white or cream was suggested for lettering on the tower.

No mention was made by any of the companies about helping to pay for the facelift, estimated to cost about $16,000 including draining, cleaning and sandblasting the tower in preparation for painting.

The city council's public works, building and zoning committee, this week indicated the job may have to wait until next spring if the city is going to foot the whole bill. Belts are being tightened in all municipal departments to cope with a projected budget deficit of about $300,000 this fiscal year.

Panel to review calendar designs

Final cover designs for the 1976 Rolling Meadows city calendar will be reviewed tonight by the city council's public information and education committee.

Artist Jack Lahr is preparing the cover of the calendar, which will commemorate the U.S. Bicentennial. It is to be printed on parchment paper and also will feature illustrations and brief texts on each of the original 13 colonies.

Representatives of Bell Litho, the firm which will print the calendar, also are expected to attend the meeting to discuss production costs with the committee.

The session will begin at 8 p.m. at city hall, 3600 Kirchoff Rd.

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1955, Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING TO the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

State sues circus to get more funds for Lions Club

by LINDA PUNCH

A temporary restraining order has been issued to protect money raised by the Schaumburg Lions Club at a circus Monday after the Illinois Attorney General's office filed suit against the circus owners.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott charged the owners of the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., an Oklahoma-based company, with forcing the Schaumburg Lions Club into an illegal contract. Scott said the contract is a "clear violation" of Illinois charitable trust laws which require charities to receive at least 75 per cent of gross receipts from such events.

The temporary restraining order prevents Moore Equipment Co. Inc., which does business as the Carson and Barnes Circus Co., from removing any funds raised from the bank or the state. Scott also is seeking to nullify the contract and obtain more money for the Lions Club.

DONALD MULACK, chief of the Charitable Trust Division, said the state is trying to have all the money solicited under the contract impounded until "we can find out how much is due the charity."

The state will also ask the court to prohibit the circus from doing business for charitable organizations in Illinois if "we find any fraud in the accounting of the circus," Mulack said.

Under the contract signed by the Schaumburg Lions Club, the circus would receive 100 per cent of all revenue from concessions; 90 per cent of revenue from reserved seat tickets sold by the circus on circus day; 50 per cent of revenue from all tickets sold in advance of circus day; and 80 per cent of all special child tickets sold in advance. The circus would also receive 25 per cent for 75 per cent of tickets sold in advance by the Lions Club.

Scott's suit charges the circus with "committing a fraud on the Illinois public by purporting to raise money for charity when, in fact, most of the money will go to the fund-raisers (circus)."

MULACK SAID A review of out-of-state professional fund raisers, such as the Carson and Barnes Circus, showed the groups "take a disproportionate amount of money for themselves — 10 to 15 per cent." He said the Schaumburg Lions were probably receiving "less than 10 per cent."

Jack Holmes, a spokesman for the Schaumburg Lions Club, said his group was not aware of the contract violated state law.

"We had the identical contract last year and no one said a word," he said, about $2,200 on last year's circus but would probably break even this year because of poor attendance.

SIX OTHER ILLINOIS charitable organizations entered into identical contracts with Carson and Barnes, including the Libertyville Jaycees.

These contracts also will be covered in the suit.

The Carson and Barnes circus also performed in Wheeling Aug. 5 to 8 at an event sponsored by the Cook County Police Assn. A CCPA spokesman said his group rented the circus for a flat fee and were not involved in splitting concession and reserved ticket fees.

The hearing for the preliminary injunction will be at 2 p.m. Friday before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Nathan Cohen.

Fire in van damages furnishings

Fire erupted Tuesday afternoon in a Global Van Lines trailer in Arlington Heights, damaging about $3,000 worth of furnishings.

The trailer, which was parked in the moving company's yard at 2512 S. Clearbrook Dr., also was severely damaged, but no estimates were available.

Fire officials said the cause of the fire was under investigation, but Ted Boyer, president of the company, said he suspected the blaze might be attributable to flammable liquids stored in some equipment. However, firefighters reported there was no gasoline in lawnmowers on the vehicle.

Global was moving possessions of Robert Matavina, Plymouth, Ind., to a home in Missouri, firefighters reported. The tractor-trailer was pulling into the Lobal lot when the driver noticed smoke coming from the trailer about 5:40 p.m.

Two fire engines were dispatched, and firefighters had to unload some of the belongings before extinguishing the fire, officials said.

Boyer said the furnishings and trailer were insured. "It was something beyond our control that it happened," he said.

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABOVE, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (688-6230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Zoners OK changes for library

The Palatine Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday night approved minor changes in the original plans for the new Palatine Public Library.

However, the board decided to subpoena Winn Davidson, developer of the 7-acre commercial project at Northwest Highway and Benton St., which includes the library, to clarify how the balance of the project will be developed.

During the hearing, zoning board members questioned legal and architectural representatives of the library board for more than two hours on the construction of a parking lot and commercial structures adjacent to the library.

Board members agreed they did not want to delay the opening of the new library in September because of confusion over the rest of the development.

DAVID KUHL, zoning board chairman said, "We are dealing with an unfortunate juxtaposition. We have a tax-supported, public service building being developed in a project with other commercial structures, which is presenting complications for the library."

All but one of the seven zoning board members approved the revisions. Comr. Louis Richter voted against the changes, because he felt they were not detailed enough.

Palatine Building Director Henry Apida objected to details in the construction of the parking lot, but not to the proposed library plan revisions. Apida suggested 23 additional parking spaces be provided and some of the existing 255 spaces be made straight-in parking rather than angular parking.

The approved revisions to the library plan include relocating 14 parking spaces, making a driveway a one-way drive, allowing a bookmobile driveway, a sidewalk and a bicycle rack to extend 10 feet beyond the library property line.

The revisions will be considered by the village's planning, building and zoning committee before going to the village board for final approval Sept. 8.

VILLAGE PRES. Wendell E. Jones, who attended the hearing, said the village board may not readily approve the revisions or final plans for the new library unless the library board agrees to spread the bond debt on the new building among all library residents.

Only Palatine village residents currently pay a special tax in addition to annual library taxes to retire the $1.3 million bond on the new library.

"Logically, the spreading of the bond debt shouldn't interfere with the approval of these changes, but emotionally it might," Jones said.

"I will urge the village board to take independent action on the bond debt and on these revisions. But I would urge the library board to commit itself on spreading the bond debt to make this whole thing easier," he said.

Library officials have said the question of spreading the bond indebtedness should be left up to a new library board to be elected in April.

A PALATINE Township senior citizen steps out of the new senior citizens bus on its first day of operation. The new bus runs five days a week from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., taking passengers all over the township for 25 cents a ride.

From 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. five days a week

Bus service for elderly a hit

by LISA PIASECKI

"Great," "fantastic," and "wonderful" are only a few of the ways Palatine Township's senior citizens describe their new bus service.

The white, 20-passenger bus began making rounds on Monday from the Senior Citizens Center, 248 S. Broadway, Palatine. Senior citizens call the center at 981-1112 at least one day in advance to give their name, address, destination, and times of departure and return.

The Palatine Township Council on Tuesday called the bus service a "great idea." She has been very disappointed with the lack of public transportation available in Palatine because she is unable to drive.

The bus operates from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays and replaces a rented bus that operated three days each week for five hours a day.

Driver Fay Dargan said the bus route differs every day depending on where the passengers live and where they want to go.

SENIOR CITIZENS may ride the bus for 25 cents to any location in Palatine Township. Frequent spots include area shopping centers, restaurants, doctor and dentist offices, and beauty and barber shops.

Ruth Schuette, one of the riders Tuesday called the bus service a "great idea." She has been very disappointed with the lack of public transportation available in Palatine because she is unable to drive.

"We couldn't get anywhere. I was ready to go back to my former home," she said.

Mrs. Schuette doesn't like her daughter to travel from Libertyville to take her shopping. The bus service allows her to do her own grocery shopping conveniently, she said.

Ruth, another senior citizen, doesn't know what she would do without the bus service. "It's a real blessing. Now we don't have to depend on our children so much to take us places," she said.

RIDERS SAID they are also pleased with the longer hours of the new bus. "Now we can spend the day visiting our friends, shop every day if we want to, and take longer trips," Ruth said.

Edna, another frequent rider, calls the bus "marvelous" and uses the service at least three times every week.

"Now that our bus runs five days a week, I'm even going to see a movie once in a while — a matinee," she said.

While the bus travels throughout Palatine Township, some of the riders would like to see the bus route extended to places like the Woodfield and Randhurst shopping centers.

Reasons for using the bus service may vary, but for most senior citizens, the new bus service means independence and mobility they might not otherwise have.

Mixed reactions greet plans for annexation

Representatives of unincorporated subdivisions had mixed reactions Tuesday to annexation conditions included in two resolutions recently proposed by the Palatine Village Board.

The village board tentatively adopted the resolutions to clarify the upgrading costs and consequences of annexation for residents of the English Valley, Heatherlea, Pepper Tree Farms and Shenandoah subdivisions north of Palatine and for Palatine Park Estates residents who live west of the village.

Representatives of English Valley and Heatherlea termed the resolutions "an act of good faith on the part of the village."

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in.

"I met almost every day and sometimes often with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING to the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My husband

Prospect may drop from state plan

by LYNN ASINOF
Financial considerations may force Mount Prospect to drop out of a group of five towns being considered for a state program which would help with the redevelopment of their central business districts.

However, officials from Arlington Heights, Palatine and Des Plaines said Tuesday they are still very interested in the program, which is estimated to cost each community around $2,500. Wilmette is the fifth community considering the program.

The state program is being developed to test a new manual prepared to help towns with downtown revitalization. Through the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, the state would hire a planner to be used in all of the participating communities to provide expertise during redevelopment.

THE STATE IS putting $10,000 towards the $22,500 project, with the participating communities sharing the remainder of the expense.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said it is "very doubtful in my mind that we will participate" because funds are not available in the budget to finance the program.

Eppley said he had hoped the village could provide its share of the expense with "in-kind services" such as office space.

Robert L. Scott of the department of local government affairs, said the program just will not work without monetary contributions from the participating villages.

"It's hard to understand how in-kind really could cover all of one's local share of the contract," Scott said of the program. "We're talking about hiring a planner. We are talking about dollars that have to be spent in hiring a person."

SCOTT SAID TALKS with the villages are still tentative, but estimated contracts with participating towns will be signed by the end of September.

Arlington Heights officials also are hoping to meet their commitment to the program by offering in-kind rather than financial contributions.

"We're very interested in the program," said Joe Kesler, Arlington Heights village planner. "The only problem is the village must provide funds and we're in the middle of the budget year."

Kesler said the village may try to work out a combination money, staff-time and office space contribution to the program. "I'm sure we'll be in it one way or the other," he said.

Des Plaines officials are interested in the program, although Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning, said he has not yet discussed monetary matters with the mayor and city council.

RICHARDSON SAID the program would be most valuable by providing market analysis and shopper surveys to find out what types of business the city should attract to the downtown area.

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said the village is interested in the program and has informally discussed contributing between $3,000 and $5,000, depending on "the type of program." He said the village also reserves the right to back out of the program.

Jones said the village needs a detailed market analysis of each of the downtown areas. "I see it is a very necessary situation prior to the next step of passing a downtown redevelopment ordinance," he said, noting the program would be worth it if Palatine could get its market analysis as a result.

Centex urges school annexations

by MARILYN McDONALD

A spokesman for Centex Homes of Illinois Inc. said his company will urge annexing the entire new Centex project in Hoffman Estates to Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 and High School Dist. 211.

David Webber, a Centex official, said his company "would pursue" the legal procedures for annexation with Dist. 15 and Dist. 211. Weber did not say when Centex would approach the boards.

The 940-unit single-family subdivision, approved by the Hoffman Esates Village Board Monday, is on 336 acres near Algonquin and Freeman roads in Palatine and Barrington townships. All land east of Freeman Road would be in Dist. 15 or Dist. 211. Homes built west of Freeman Road would be in Barrington Township Unit Dist. 220.

THE BULK of the development, 610 units will be in Dist. 220. But Dist. 220 officials say they want no more children in their district. Any children they might get from the new Centex development would be bused nine miles to Carpentersville, they say.

On the other hand, Dist. 15 officials have accepted a 10-acre school site plus a $32,900 cash contribution for the part of the development already in their district. Dist. 211 board members expressed willingness to annex the Barrington Township portion of the new development if they could annex past the development west to Barrington Road and north to Bradwell Road.

In order to legally annex the Barrington Township portion of the development, all three districts would have to submit petitions to the Cook County Educational Service Region. Hearings would be held on the proposal, and a hearing board would then approve or disapprove the move.

DIST. 15 Supt. Frank Whiteley said no one has formally approached that school board to annex the Dist. 220 land. Dist. 15 officials have not talked with Dist. 211 officials about the possible annexation, he said.

Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze said the board expressed interest in annexation on the strength of what it read in local press accounts about the new development. "No one approached us in an official way," Kolze said.

Webber said that Centex hopes to build its model homes this year, with construction of some of the first homes this year also.

Plans for annex get varied reactions

Assn. and of a citizens' committee opposed to the annexation said the conditions provided were not specific or clear enough.

"The resolutions are not complete and the terminology needs to be clearer. But, the introduction of such resolutions is an indication that the village board and president are sincere and willing to be responsive to the prime concerns of residents out here," said Allen Finkelman, a member of the citizens' group and a Heatherlea resident.

Finkelman was among several unincorporated area residents who requested that the village draft a special resolution to outline what changes, increased costs and special assessments will be required of newly annexed residents.

Finkelman said he is drafting his own resolution with specific concerns that he said the village's proposed resolutions do not include. He will present the resolution to Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones today for consideration by the village board, he said.

"The resolutions must be more specific. We're talking about areas that already have water systems separate from the village's. Who's going to decide whether our septic tanks present a hazard and what special assessments are we going to get hit with," he said.

"We still don't know about changes we'll have to make in our homes so they conform with village standards once we annex. Last we heard, it would cost about $5,000 to make the improvements on each home," he said.

EUGENE DORSCH, president of the English Valley Homeowners' Assn., said the resolutions "address all the questions that most residents have asked."

"Sure the board can get more specific, but you have to be practical about this too. I think the conditions provided are enough to satisfy the people out here," he said.

Dorsch said that area residents have volunteered to circulate petitions on the annexation question following the village board's final approval of the resolutions Monday.

The petition drive was scheduled to begin last weekend but was postponed because of last minute confusion over the impact of the annexation. Petitions are not being circulated in any of the unincorporated areas.

Wayne Peterson, president of the Pepper Tree Homeowners' Assn., said that the resolutions "will not make any difference in the way the people feel out here about annexation. They just don't want it."

PETERSON SAID 100 of the 227 homeowners in the area were recently polled and that more than two-thirds of the respondents oppose annexation.

"They seem to feel there's just no benefit in it and that it's just going to cost them more in taxes, so any conditions the village offers really won't make much difference out here," he said.

However, Donald Barry, president of the Heatherlea Homeowners' Assn., said the resolution "will help to restore the faith that people out here must have in the village if they are going to annex."

The proposed resolutions will be reviewed with an informal committee of residents that has been formed by the village during a meeting Saturday at 10 a.m. at the village hall, 54 S. Brockway St. Annexation plans, that have been redrawn by the village at the request of the residents, will also be reviewed.

The proposed resolutions provide conditions that include:

- Streets and sidewalks are adequate and require no changes.

- Streetlights will be changed only upon request by residents or if they pose a hazard.

- Police protection will be uniformly provided throughout the village and newly annexed areas.

- Special assessments will not be spread to areas that don't benefit from them.

- Septic tank or well owners will not be charged by the village unless their facilities become a hazard.

- Northern subdivision residents will continue to receive services from the Ferndale Heights Utility Co. under the present policies.

- Palatine Park Estates residents will receive services from the village-owned L and K Utility Co. under the current rates unless the rates do not cover the cost of operating and maintaining the utility.

- Efforts will be made to annex the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Lincoln Elementary School and Palatine Hills Junior High School.

Miseries of hayfever nothing to sneeze at

by JOE SWICKARD

Hold on to your handkerchief. It's the sneezin' season again.

Late summertime and the breathing is wheezy as ragweeds release billions of pollen particles into the air and eventually into the eyes, ears, noses and throats of allergy sufferers.

From the first week of August through the peak in September until the first killing frost, vacation tans will be complemented by puffy, watery eyes and runny noses.

The culprit in most cases of hayfever is the pollen of the ragweed plant, an ugly specimen that must rely upon the wind to reproduce, said Gary Libman, a microbiologist and head of environmental testing in the hospital products division of Abbott Laboratories, North Chicago.

ABBOT, as a public service, counts pollen in the air and transmits the information to the millions of hayfever victims through a recorded telephone message (688-5230).

Libman said the weed sends out the pollen to reproduce and it is inhaled by persons sensitive to it. As Libman explained, the discomfort comes from the body's fight with the foreign elements.

To counteract the pollen, the body

produces histamines which in turn dilate blood vessels. The dilation produces the telltale puffy eyes and red nose of a hayfever attack.

All this would not happen if the ragweed were not an ugly, unattractive plant, Libman said.

Pity the poor ragweed, he said, so dull and common that bees and other insects are just not drawn to it as they are the more colorful plants. So instead of insects spreading the pollen, ragweed must produce an excess of the particles to be windborne to other ragweeds to spawn more of their kind.

TO MAKE MATTERS worse, Chicago is in the heart of the "pollen belt," Libman said. The region, "worst in the area," he said, has just the right conditions to favor the growth of ragweed.

The area is so bad that even the central city, miles from fields of ragweed, is not immune from the airborne invasion, he said.

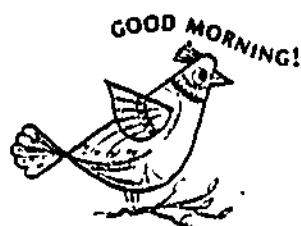

But it is not only ragweed that causes the suffering, Libman said. The spores of two molds, alternaria and hormodendrum, also can induce the agony.

Because we are just entering the hayfever season, counts of ragweed and mold are relatively low. Tuesday's count was 8 pollen grains, 38 alternaria, and 42 hormodendrum spores per cubic yard. Things get bad for most people when the pollen counts range from 300 to 400, Abbott said.

Libman recommends that those with hayfever visit an allergist for desensitizing treatments before the season starts. Once the pollen starts flying, he said air conditioners or "electronic air scrubbers" can reduce the pollen count in the home or office.

The air scrubbers spin the air, he said, causing the heavier pollen and mold spores to be separated from it.

Village may leave state business plan

by LYNN ASINOF

Financial considerations may force Mount Prospect to drop out of a group of five towns being considered for a state program which would help with the redevelopment of their central business districts.

However, officials from Arlington Heights, Palatine and Des Plaines said Tuesday they are still very interested in the program, which is estimated to cost each community around $2,500. Wilmette is the fifth community considering the program.

The state program is being developed to test a new manual prepared to help towns with downtown revitalization. Through the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs, the state would hire a planner to be used in all of the participating communities to provide expertise during redevelopment.

THE STATE IS putting $10,000 towards the $22,500 project, with the participating communities sharing the remainder of the expense.

Mount Prospect Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said it is "very doubtful in my mind that we will participate" because funds are not available in the budget to finance the program.

Eppley said he had hoped the village could provide its share of the expense with "in-kind services" such as office space.

Robert L. Scott of the department of local government affairs, said the program just will not work without monetary contributions from the participating villages.

"It's hard to understand how in-kind really could cover all of one's local share of the contract," Scott said of the program. "We're talking about hiring a planner. We are talking about dollars that have to be spent in hiring a person."

SCOTT SAID TALKS with the villages are still tentative, but estimated contracts with participating towns will be signed by the end of September.

Arlington Heights officials also are hoping to meet their commitment to the program by offering in-kind rather than financial contributions.

"We're very interested in the program," said Joe Kesler, Arlington Heights village planner. "The only problem is the village must provide funds and we're in the middle of the budget year."

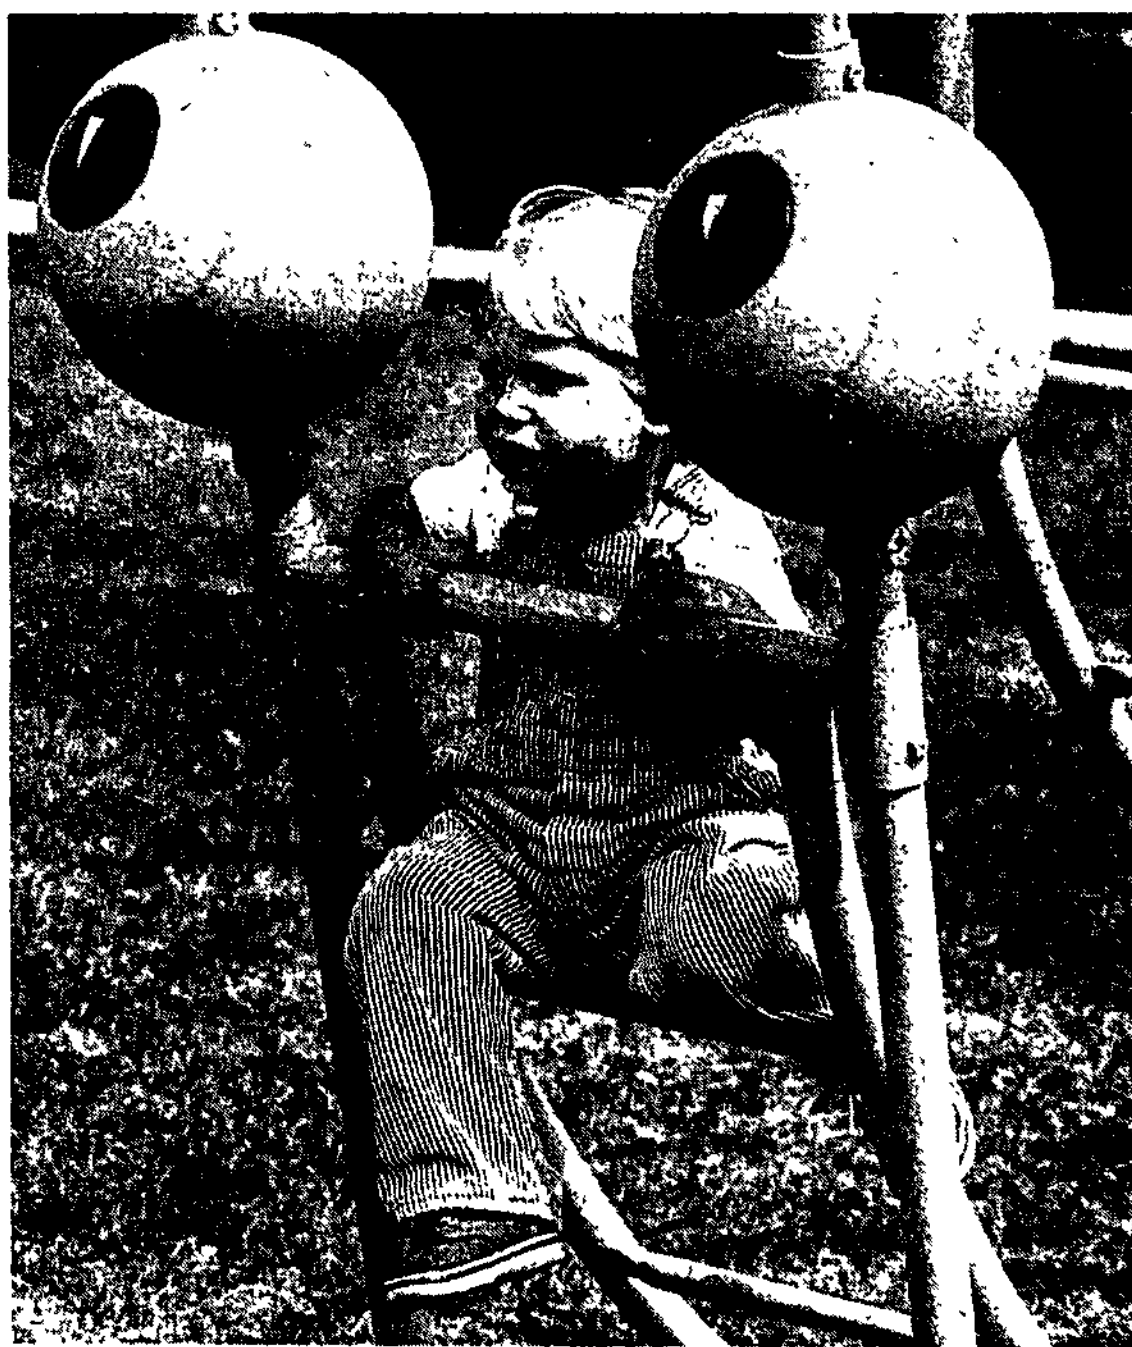

Kesler said the village may try to work out a combination money, staff-time and office space contribution to the program. "I'm sure we'll be in it one way or the other," he said.

Des Plaines officials are interested in the program, although Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning, said he has not yet discussed monetary matters with the mayor and city council.

RICHARDSON SAID the program would be most valuable by providing market analysis and shopper surveys to find out what types of business the city should attract to the downtown area.

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said the village is interested in the program and has informally discussed contributing between $3,000 and $5,000, depending on "the type of program." He said the village also reserves the right to back out of the program.

Jones said the village needs a detailed market analysis of each of the downtown areas. "I see it is a very necessary situation prior to the next step of passing a downtown redevelopment ordinance," he said, noting the program would be worth it if Palatine could get its market analysis as a result.

ROBBIE KURZ, 2, gets an eyeball view from "The River Trails Park District. New playground equipment is being installed at several parks, with completion scheduled for within two weeks.

Utility monitoring plan evaluation set in October

Citizens Utilities Company's new monitoring system, which went into effect in July, will be evaluated in October at two special hearings conducted by the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC).

Raymond Petersen, attorney representing the Village of Mount Prospect at the hearings, said the ICC has delayed further hearings on the quality of Citizens Utilities water and service until the monitoring system is evaluated.

"It was agreed that Citizens Utilities would continue their service quality survey through the end of September and at that time they would meet with the village officials from the various villages that they serve," Petersen said. "Then they would have another hearing in October to see what the continuing defects are."

PETERSEN SAID, however, the hearings do not indicate an end to the ICC probe into the quality of Citizens Utilities service.

"There has been no order by the commission office," he said. "The case is continuing."

Mount Prospect representatives are scheduled to meet with Citizens Utilities to discuss the monitoring program Sept. 30 at the utility company's offices. Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said he has gotten no information on the monitoring program.

"Whatever they have I imagine they'll unveil it at the meeting," Eppley said.

THE MONITORING program was put into effect in mid-July, and consists of a complex series of records and tests. The program is designed to pinpoint any deficiencies in the system, which serves about 2,350 homes in the New Town area of Mount Prospect and another 500 homes in unincorporated Waycinden Park near Des Plaines.

Citizens Utilities agreed to adopt the program after the Village of Mount Prospect asked the ICC to order immediate improvements to the utility system. Mount Prospect residents have often complained about rust, oil and sand in the water as well as water outages and low pressure. These complaints prompted the ICC hearings.

The evaluation sessions are scheduled for Oct. 14 and 15. Walter S. Larson, general manager of the utility company, said it will take 60 to 90 days to obtain sufficient data to provide feedback on the system.

Larson said he is convinced the monitoring system will confirm the company's position that its water meets all requirements of the regulatory bodies.

Hydrant colors remain 'unpatriotic'

Red, white and blue will decorate much of Mount Prospect in honor of the nation's Bicentennial, but the village fire hydrants will retain their current unpatriotic colors.

Fire Chief Lawrence Palritz said the village has received several requests to paint the hydrants in patriotic designs. "But because village hydrants are color coded to indicate the potential water available, it cannot be done without sacrificing efficiency during a fire," he said.

The hydrants also are painted with a special paint that insures visibility for easy location at the time of an emergency.

"ALTHOUGH painting hydrants could make them into an interesting and attractive item, the important use of fire hydrants is to be functional," Palritz said. "For this reason they cannot be painted for the Bicentennial celebration," he added.

The village also had attempted to have the Chicago and North Western Ry. station in downtown Mount Prospect painted red, white and blue for the Bicentennial.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said the village offered to bear the expense of painting the station, which he said is badly in need of a new coat. He said the railroad turned down the village's offer, saying it would repaint the building in September.

Mount Prospect's water tower, will, however, wear the red, white and blue during the Bicentennial year. The top of the tower will be painted white, to deal with what Eppley termed "pigeon problems," with red and blue used on the under side of the tower. The numbers 1976 and 1977 will be stenciled on the tower's side.

Dirksen was 'the master': Ford

Pekin, Ill. (UPI) — President Ford paid tribute Tuesday to the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, terming him "the master" from whom he learned the political trade.

The President spoke at the dedication ceremony of the Everett McKinley Dirksen Congressional Leadership Research Center, a modern wing of the Pekin Public Library.

Recalling that when he became Republican leader of the House in 1965, and Dirksen was the Senate GOP leader, Ford said, "I was the new boy but he never put me down. Instead he took me in.

"I met almost every day and sometimes oftener with the master, and he taught me the trade. He knew as much about the House as I did, and everything about the Senate."

HUNDREDS TURNED out for the presidential visit, which coincided with Pekin's third annual marigold festival. "This city really looks beautiful today with so many thousands of Ev's favorite flowers in bloom," the President said.

A shirt-sleeved crowd of close to 8,000 persons gathered in hot sunny weather at the intersection of Broadway and Sabella streets for the open air dedication ceremony. A big red, white and blue sign read: "Pekin Welcomes President Ford."

There was a carnival atmosphere in the city of 31,000 with hundreds lining the street waving flags in welcome.

Ford said Dirksen, who died in 1969 after 37 years in Congress, achieved prominence through "the sheer power of his unique personality, his persuasiveness and profound gift of leadership, and his consummate legislative skill."

REFERRING to the privately financed library, Ford said, "I learned a lot from Ev, and it is only fitting that others should learn from him also.

"The Dirksen Research Center with mementos and papers from his long and productive career will enable generations of students to learn more about how the U.S. Congress works."

"I think it's wonderful the tapes of the senator's speeches will be available to students, because his voice and presence were part of his political magic," Ford said.

Mrs. Louella Dirksen, the senator's widow, was present at the ceremony. Ford quoted her as writing: "My hus-

She helps mold school's future

by MARILYN McDONALD
Idyl Nipper is probably more familiar to residents of River Trails Dist. 26 than some of the district's former superintendents or board members. But then there probably are few others who have contributed as consistently to the district as Miss Nipper.

She has served on countless committees and study groups for the school district. She is a life-long member of the PTA. Despite the fact that she never married or had children of her own, Miss Nipper has outlasted the most devoted parents in her work for the district, because she believes in citizen involvement to make government work.

A farm girl from Johnson County in southern Illinois, Miss Nipper, now 67, moved to the Chicago area with her family in the 1920s. She and her mother ran an antique store on the city's North Side but moved the business to Mount Prospect in 1946. They bought six acres of land, an old farmhouse and barn on the site of the present Westgate Apartments, and ran the Red Barn antique store for 15 years.

WHEN MISS NIPPER came to the area, the residents of the area were served by the one-room Feehanville School, opened in 1924. A three-man board ran Feehanville Dist. 26, but residents were unhappy with the way the board dragged its heels in installing indoor plumbing at the school.

Miss Nipper, then an officer in the Prospect Gardens subdivision association, was approached by parents from the Forest River subdivision to serve on a citizens committee for the district. She agreed, and thus began several decades of work for the district.

As the area grew and more schools were needed, Miss Nipper worked on bond issues and referendums for Euclid School (1960), Indian Grove School (1964), River Trails Junior High School (1965), Park View School (1966) and Bond School (1968). But her most recent effort to replace River Road School at Maryville Academy may result in the school being named for her.

When Maryville Academy for dependent children was forced by finances to close its school in 1968, the pupils became the responsibility of Dist. 26. Most of the children could be placed in existing district classrooms, but some Maryville students were too unstable to react well in a regular classroom situation. The district opened River Road School in the north wing of the academy to meet those students' needs.

FROM THE START, River Road school was in poor physical condition and could pass only temporarily safety regulations. State funds were available to cover the entire cost of building a new school, but an approved site had to be found by the district. When a site adjacent to the River Trails Junior High School was proposed, a controversy began.

"I'd been involved too long and worked too hard in the district to see an issue like this split it apart," Miss Nipper said. So in her time-honored fashion, she got involved.

"I was not opposed to the (River Trails) site, but the more I looked at it, the less I liked it. We would have had to use adjacent park district property as a playground, and that could complicate things in the future," she said.

Heading up a citizens' committee to find other sites Miss Nipper said land on the Maryville campus proved to be the most reasonably priced. When the state took soil borings on a Maryville site, however, the land turned out to be the filled-in Feehanville drainage ditch, unsuitable for building.

Miss Nipper's knowledge of the district went back to the days when the Feehanville ditch had been rerouted on the Maryville campus. She encouraged Dist. 26 to take additional soil borings 150 feet away from the state borings. Her memory served her well — that land was buildable.

ALTHOUGH HER involvement in the schools would be adequate outside activity for almost anyone else, Miss Nipper has spent many hours working for the Wheeling Township Republican Party and observing the Mount Prospect Village Board.

"We need to get more people involved. If we're going to have the kinds of schools and government institutions people seem to want, we can't sit back and not get involved," Miss Nipper said.

Dist. 26 Board of Education members are giving serious thought to naming the new school on the Maryville campus for Miss Nipper when it is completed in March. And after years of having something to say on everything the district has done, Miss Nipper was caught off-guard.

"For once in my life, I'm speechless, and that doesn't happen very often," she laughed.

A FACE FAMILIAR to residents of River Trails Dist. 26, Idyl Nipper has been involved with the schools for two decades. Board members are considering naming the district's new school on the Maryville Academy campus for her. Miss Nipper also has been active in the Wheeling Township Republican organization.

Early chicken farmers feathered nests here

by TOM VON MALDER
Prospect Heights originally was sold as an area of chicken farms for "gentlemen farmers."

"The idea was that businessmen could work in the city (Chicago) and have weekend farms out here," said Joyce Armstrong, the Prospect Heights librarian. She is heading an effort to create an audio-visual history of the Prospect Heights area.

The chicken farm idea developed during the mid-1930s; the era just after the Great Depression. She said the land was sold mostly in acre lots under apparently one of the first Federal Housing Administration mortgage programs.

Mrs. Armstrong said these facts were gathered from 14 interviews with residents who have lived in Prospect Heights since before 1940.

She said much of the information has been verified through the help of the Chicago Public Library. There is a chance the group preparing the audio-visual history may be able to speak to Carlton Smith, one of the original developers of the area, who reportedly lives in Florida, she said.

ONE RESIDENT told the interviewers some of the first tri-level homes in the nation were built in Prospect Heights.

Mrs. Armstrong said the original maps of the area show several streets, which are dead ends today, as through streets. "The people stopped this," she said, as "part of the consistent attitude of the residents to keep this area rural."

Newer residents of the area will be interviewed next for the audio-visual history project. Mrs. Armstrong said residents in southeast Prospect Heights will be asked about the growth of their area.

A tape and slide presentation will be assembled from all the information, and a narrative script will be written. A booklet also may be published.

Fire guts treehouse; arson suspected

Wheeling firefighters extinguished a fire that destroyed a small treehouse Tuesday night at the rear of the 1000 block of Valleystream Drive.

Firemen had to stretch fire hoses across a creek to douse the flames about 9:30 p.m. Fire officials said they suspect someone set fire to the structure made from lumber scraps.

100 help stage 'Oliver'

The Mount Prospect Village Board Tuesday night approved an amendment to its planned unit development ordinance allowing for changes in the village's Colony development, Oakton and Elmhurst roads.

The action allows Lincoln Property Co., Arlington Heights, developers of the complex, to build 79 apartments in place of a hotel, bank and office facilities originally proposed on eight acres of the 32-acre site.

In a 3-to-2 vote, the board overturned a recent zoning board of appeals denial of the planned revision, but only after lengthy debate.

Much of the opposition was voiced by Trustee Richard N. Hendricks, who supported the zoning board decision and said the matter was a zoning change and not an amendment to the planned unit development ordinance.

Hendricks said he believed a two-thirds majority of the full board would be necessary to overrule the zoning board of appeals decision. Trustees Michael Minton and Leo Floros were absent.

Mayor Robert Teichert ruled, however, the revised plans were not a zoning matter and required only a simple majority vote. Teichert was called upon to cast the tie breaker in the absence of Minton and Floros.

Trustees Theodore Wattenburg and Errol F. Richardson supported Teichert for approving the measure. Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr. joined Hendricks in his dissent. An earlier Hendricks motion, challenging Teichert's ruling, was defeated for lack of a second.

In a presentation, Lewis Levey, an official of the Lincoln Property Co., said the firm asked for the change as a "response to market conditions," dictating the increased demand for housing and less demand for commercial development.

A team of three — Frank Delgiudice, Nancy Evans and John Martin — did a super job handling the direction and production. They pulled together a wide age range as well as a wide talent range to produce a thrilling show. The choreography and costumes, too, were great.

The set was rather ingenious. Unique haphazard-looking pieces of wood hunks served well for many scenes. The orchestra, good but small, was led by Scott Arkenbert. Technical assistance was by Ed Toczyski.

Mention also should be made of the program for "Oliver." It was a nice 16-page booklet about three quarters full of ads from local merchants, but with explanations and full recognition for all performers, helpers and patrons.

The park district did a handy bang-up job on the musical. The only sour note would be having outsiders (like Fagin) in a Mount Prospect Park District production. Area people would rather see local people — even if not as excellent — in the roles.

Hipwell attends music institute

Douglas Hipwell, 910 S. I-Oka Ave., Mount Prospect, participated this summer in the American Suzuki Institute at the University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point campus.

The institute drew nearly 2,000 young musicians, their parents and teachers from across the nation.

The Suzuki method is based on the concept that any child can learn to play an instrument and focuses on imitation and repetition.

$2,500 in jewelry stolen from home

An estimated $2,500 worth of jewelry reportedly was stolen Monday from the William Botsinger residence, 514 S. Emerson St., Mount Prospect.

Police said the jewelry was taken from two upstairs bedrooms between 3 and 4 p.m. Police said they found no signs of forced entry.

PHIA plans 3-day Bicentennial event

The Prospect Heights Improvement Association's Bicentennial committee is planning a three-day celebration of the nation's birthday for next summer.

The committee, headed by Lynn Klotz, has tentatively picked the June 11 to 13, 1976 weekend for the festivities and has begun meeting with representatives from various community organizations to coordinate the community's celebration plans.

"We hope to have a full weekend of activities," Ms. Klotz said Tuesday.

She said the June weekend was selected as the likely one because of the expected difficulty in obtaining bands for any activities around July 4. "We were also told to stay away from other holidays, such as Memorial Day," she said.

THE GROUP'S TENTATIVE plans so far call for a three-day carnival, parade and political forum. Ms. Klotz said each night of the carnival will have a different era theme — 1776, 1876 and 1976.

Participants in the carnival will wear clothing of each era each night, there will be different games of each era to play and there may even be food cooked in the style of each era.

Ms. Klotz said the group also hopes to encourage town decorations in the Bicentennial theme. "So far we haven't had many volunteers," she said. "Any we can get will be a real help."

The group's first fund-raising activity will be a white elephant sale during the Sept. 21 Oktoberfest at the St. Alphonsus Church and school grounds, 411 N. Wheeling Rd. Donations, with the exception of clothes and appliances, are being sought for the sale.

With the coordination among the community organizations, Ms. Klotz said she hopes each group will undertake a different event so there will be no duplication of effort. She asks that any interested group, business or resident contact her by calling 255-9678.

Police push bicycle relicensing

Mount Prospect police are continuing their efforts to have all bicycles in the village relicensed.

The licenses will have blue letters and numbers on a reflective white background. Residents will not be charged for the licenses.

Funds for the licenses have been provided through an Illinois Dept. of Transportation bicycle safety grant.

Police Chief Ralph J. Doney said relicensing will help prevent bike thefts and assist police in identifying the owners of recovered bikes. The department's bike files need to be brought up to date, Doney said. He said the problem with the old licenses was the numbers were off easily.

The licenses are available at the police station, 112 E. Northwest Hwy. There also will be a re-registration drive this fall at schools in the village.

Correction

Students at St. Paul Lutheran School, 18 S. School St., Mount Prospect, will register for classes Tuesday, Aug. 26, at the school, instead of Tuesday, Aug. 19, as reported in Monday's Herald.
